Will Japan Be Foolish? "Forgive Us Our Debts." The Whole World Armed. Don't Envy Farmers.

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921.

We have many important problems, from 600,000 idle freight cars to 5,000,000 idle men in the United States, but nothing compares with the Japanese problem in importance.

The Japanese would like domination over both sides of the Pacific, but many of them are wise enough to know they cannot have it.

In Washington eleven States, California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado, have organized with Hiram Johnson as chairman of their organization to meet the Japanese situation. They have no stronger man in Japan than Hiram Johnson, and the eleven States mentioned could, if necessary, take care of Japan and her ambitions on this side of the Pacific. Those eleven States, and thirty-seven more, would make the Mikado sympathize with the late Czar.

But war, even a long taxes war, with Japan, would be a calamity for the world, a burning up of many billions of dollars, interruption, perhaps prolonged, of the world's effort to rebuild, a disaster for which the elimination of Japan as a troublesome egotist among nations would not be sufficient recompense.

This complication is the swift result of the asinine action of the late sick and crippled government, tying the United States up with European and Asiatic complications. What would have happened had the worst occurred and this nation been allowed to drift into the League of Nations?

How stern with others, how lenient with ourselves. The Bible preaches it, "the beam in your own eye," etc., the Allies illustrate it.

They are shocked at Germany's reluctance to pay swiftly the war debt of scores of billions fastened upon them by defeat. No name is too harsh for Germany's failure to pay.

What about the Allies' debts to the United States? You see no eagerness to pay that, only evasion, and not a cent of interest or principal has been offered. Yet that was a debt of honor, money lent to friends driven to extremity. A common gambler would show SOME desire to pay such a debt.

What would the Allies say if we demanded that they put within our reach their total stock of gold as security for our deal, even though it belonged to private individuals, not to the government? That is what the Allies now demand of Germany.

Not much peace anywhere yet. Fools here demand immediate United States disarmament "as an example to the world." Once try that folly and Japan would show the world something.

In Europe nineteen nations have 3,328,000 men actually under arms. France has 800,000 and may call 200,000 more to invade Germany. Poland has 600,000 armed men; little Greece has 250,000. How do she and Poland feed and pay them?

How would you like to be an American farmer? Wheat yesterday fell to a new low record. July wheat down to within 3 cents of $1. Oats sold around 37 cents, and were about $1.50 a year ago. Prices of fertilizer, agricultural implements, taxes, labor and everything the farmer must have, drop not at all or very little. There is another problem. Farmers will not forever raise food to sell for less than it costs them. One farmer in New Jersey gave away 500 bushels of potatoes "rather than sell them for 25 cents a bushel," all he could get. Did you buy potatoes so cheap or anywhere near it? Distribution is the trouble, too many middlemen with too high a "rake-off."

Exports in France exceed imports, first time in a long while. It sounds like good news, and all hope it is. But exports exceeded imports for the first time in many years, just before the French revolution. It is not always a good sign when the farmer sells all his fresh eggs to the store and eats salt pork.

This country has resumed sending mail to Russia. Congratulations to Postmaster Hays and his boss, the President. We at least allow letters to go, even though Russia has the impertinence to manage her government without asking our permission or approval. We let the Sultan of Turkey have 400 wives and sent him polite ambassadors. Why not let Russians have 400 queer ideas, if they want them? They will pay for it if they are wrong, as the Sultan paid for his wives.

England actually seems to be settling her coal strike labor troubles, the government interesting itself in the problem instead of leaving labor and its troubles to "luck," or "the iron law," or the "law of supply and demand," in the old fashioned way.

The government will try to arrange for each man to work if willing to work, and for each to make enough to live decently—owners and employes must cooperate.

We shall have to do that here some day. But the day is far off. Thus far our government can strain a point and find billions for railroads. It has not reached workers and their troubles yet. But it WILL reach them or those troubles will reach the government.

PROTESTS PUBLICITY IN INQUIRY

Former Senator Objects to Record of Office Mate's Note Being Printed

Ex-Senator James F. Cavanagh of Everett today defied the Elevated investigating committee.

"You are just a smelling committee.

"You have no right to publication of information you obtain.

"Your power consists in making a noise."

He hurled these statements at the committee in objecting to an attempt to read into the investigation records of the Fidelity Trust Company showing loans to Edward T. Hasson, office associate of Cavanagh.

When the hearing was resumed today George A. Taft, counsel for the committee said he intended to read the Trust Company records.

"I object to that in toto," shouted Cavanagh. "I think I have some rights here as a private citizen, and I protest against the methods of this investigation.

"I came here willingly yesterday

He pleaded not guilty, his case was continued to May 9, and he was released on the original bonds of $20,000. The man was then rushed through a private door into the City Prison, out to Somerset street, where he jumped into an automobile and was whisked away.

An investigation of the records of the city treasurer's office, extending back ten years, to trace the admitted defalcations of Cashier O'Daly, and a probable

BANDITS ROUTED IN GUN BATTLE

An hour later Patrolman Kerwin sighted one of the men in the underbrush near the North Woburn-Billerica line, but the fugitive escaped after another gun duel. Later today was discovered the Winchester revolver had been thrown into during the night robbery by the same trio.

PRISONER APPEARS CHEERFUL

Many Women in Throng That Fills Court to See Loud; Case Again Postponed

Hundreds of persons, including many well-dressed women, were massed in and around Malden District Courthouse today when Clarence W. Loud made his second appearance there on the charge of the murder of Patrolman James A. Preston of Wakefield.

The accused salesman appeared cheerful and in excellent health. He took no notice of the throng. As was expected, his case was continued for two weeks by agreement of District Attorney Tufts and Judge Malcolm E. Stuntevant, his counsel.

In the meantime, the special session of the Middlesex Grand Jury will have made some sort of report on the case.

Loud made no attempt to dodge newspaper photographers when he was taken from the covered van to the courthouse entrance.

When his name was called he stepped briskly in the bar. Judge Stuntevant and Assistant District Attorney Herman A. Wagner immediately explained their agreement for continuance.

Loud looked at the crowd only once, while he stood at the bar. In the party in the Courthouse were several women who have known him and his wife well. Outside on Linden avenue and Pleasant street a crowd of

CONGRESS BALKS BIG NAVY AS JAP SITUATION GROWS ACUTE

ARRIVAL OF WOOD IN TOKIO IS EAGERLY WATCHED

Washington, April 21.—The unbroken silence which administration officials maintained on the American-Japanese situation today only served to emphasize how acute they recognize it to be.

Japan's reply to American's virtual ultimatum that she subscribe to the principle of American rights, Washington, in not only Yap but in all other mandate territory as well, is being anxiously awaited.

Press dispatches from Tokio stating that the Japanese cabinet will stand pat in her refusal to internationalize the island of Yap were read with grave concern in official circles today. But no comments were heard.

WOODS' TRIP SIGNIFICANT.

With Major-General Leonard Wood due to arrive in Tokio today, official Washington did not attempt to conceal the fact that news of the nature of his reception will be eagerly awaited. The ostensible purpose of General Wood's mission is to investigate conditions in the Philippines. It is regarded as highly significant, however, that his departure followed closely upon receipt of the second of Japan's daily uncompromising notes with reference to Yap.

The attitude of Japan is of the utmost importance as affecting Great Britain's mind. As sized up here Japan is determined to force Great Britain to show her hand and indicate whether she will hold fast to her allegiance or permit Japan to be isolated in her fight against the American principle of mandates.

Japan, from the very beginning, has remained Adamant in her stand for exclusive control of Yap. She was offered many compromises in sessions of the communications conference, it was stated today, but she rejected them all, despite the combined protest of the United States, France and Italy.

$100,000,000 NAVY CUT.

In the face of this situation, Secretary of the Navy Denby, in conference with House and Senate leaders, was notified that opposition to big naval appropriations among new members of the House made it inoperative that he accept a reduction of $100,000,000 from the total carried in the Senate bill of the last session. Such a reduction would all but upset the present building program.

Tokio Cabinet Council Approves "Firm Attitude"

Tokio, April 21.—The Cabinet Council today approved the "firm attitude" of the Foreign Office in the controversy with the United States over the island of Yap. Marquis Okuma, former Prime Minister, is quoted in an interview published in Hochi as saying:

"The action of the United States on Yap is illogical and incomprehensible. I cannot approve of America's attitude. It is overbearing. The question was settled by the Supreme Council and America did not then protest against the settlement."

Must Prepare for War With Japan, Says Hobson

New York, April 21.—"America must awaken and prepare for war with Japan. It may come any day. It may be delayed a year or two. But I regard it under prevailing conditions as inevitable."

Captain Richmond Pierson Hobson, hero of the Merrimac episode in the Spanish-American war, made the forecasting prophecy at the Hotel McAlpin in newspaper men.

"The Mikado's government," said Hobson, "has been doing its utmost to educate its people psychologically to the necessity and certainty of war with the United States. This has been the more apparent since California and other Pacific Coast States protested against the 'yellow peril.'

"Japan has been breaking the record in increasing her navy and army. Only yesterday it was announced that she had ordered five thousand airplanes. These could be used to dynamite our ships, cities and the Panama and other canals.

"Meantime we have reduced the size of our army and have been proceeding all too slowly in adding to our navy. As for our air service—well ask the authorities at Washington about how meagre it is."

Brands Gompers as an Autocratic Demagogue

"Had the war lasted a year longer we might have had the rule of Sam Gompers and his damn gang over here, and been worse off than under Wilhelm of Germany.

"When the war broke out the attitude of union labor and its leaders was selfish, seditious, disgraceful and disloyal.

"It is foolish to say that a man who criticizes Sam Gompers and his gang is an enemy of labor.

"Gompers is a demagogue more autocratic and unprincipled than any potentate."

From speech of Congressman Charles L. Underhill of Somerville at National Metal Trades Association convention in New York.

11 STATES JOIN ANTI-JAP PACT

Senator Johnson Made Chairman of Alliance to Fight Invasion of Orientals

Washington, April 21.—Senators and representatives of the eleven Far-West States batting with the Japanese problem met here and formed an organization designed to bring about a solid front in the fight against the overrunning of the Pacific Coast by the Orientals.

Senator Hiram Johnson of California, was made chairman of the Alliance of States.

Nearly twenty Senators and twice that number of Representatives participated in the meeting held in the capital building.

V. S. McClatchy, of Sacramento, Cal., representing the Japanese Exclusion League of California, sounded the warning against the ultimate swamping of the white race, which can be prevented only by Exclusion Acts.

"California's battle in this situation is the battle of all the states represented here and it is a situation which merits the undivided attention of us all," said the chairman. Senator Johnson who was authorized to appoint an executive committee consisting of one senator and one representative from each state.

The eleven States whose members of Congress appeared in the conference resulting in the alliance dedicated to Japan exclusion were California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado.

FLAYS 'GOMPERS AND HIS GANG'

Congressman Underhill of Somerville Launches Bitter Attack on Labor Leaders

Denouncing "Samuel Gompers and his damn gang" as autocratic, unprincipled and disloyal, Congressman Charles L. Underhill of Somerville made one of the bitterest attacks on leaders of organized labor that has been launched in a decade, in a speech at the annual convention of the National Metal Trades Association in New York.

Congressman Underhill is head of the Underhill Hardware Company of Somerville. He was elected to Congress last Fall.

"Samuel Gompers was the only man who had the key to the White House during Mr. Wilson's administration," he declared.

"Had the war lasted much longer we would have been worse off than under the rule of Wilhelm.

"While my boy and yours were trying to save the world from the rule of an autocrat and demagogue our land was laid open to the rule of an autocrat and demagogue more autocratic and unprincipled than any potentate.

"For the honest workman two courses are open. He may tear up his union card or he may take control of the unions away from those now in office.

"During the last year of the war Sam Gompers was bigger than Wilson and the American Federation of Labor was bigger than the government itself.

"During the war Gompers, Foster, Morrison, Duncan and Woll were boring from within to take away from the boys in France the right to live and the right to labor when they returned.

"I want to make a distinction between organized labor and labor, and a further distinction between organized labor and its leaders. There is as much heresy in claiming criticism of President Wilson was not patriotic as in claiming that a man who criticizes Sam Gompers and his gang is not friendly to labor."

Congressman Underhill charged that labor heads were above the law in the matter of spending millions and never accounting for them. Four hundred members of the National Metal Trades wildly cheered his attack.

"MYSTERY WOMAN" IMMUNE.

The State officials appeared today to be confident that a true bill will be returned against Loud as a result of the strong case which they claim they have decided, judging from developments behind the scenes in the past two days, there appears to be little, if any, prospect of an indictment against the so-called "mystery woman," who was Loud's alleged companion on the night of the tragedy.

There seems to be ground for the prediction that she will never be prosecuted. That she would be given immunity if she consents to become a witness for the State is obvious, but such a step seems doubtful.

In turning State's evidence the woman would accuse the man who made A supreme sacrifice for her, placing his own life in jeopardy by the alleged slaying of a policeman in the performance of his duty, to shield her name and that of her family, rather than to protect himself, according to the government allegations.

IDENTITY ESTABLISHED.

Therefore, interest today centred on the question whether she would even be a witness before the grand jury. In the event that she is not made a co-defendant on the charge of being an accessory after the fact in murder, it may be stated on the highest authority, despite persistent reports to the contrary, that the government has established the identity of the "mystery woman" to its own satisfaction.

Whether the evidence in hand would satisfy a jury of twelve of her peers might be another matter, it is argued, but one thing is certain, and that is that the State is not blindly fighting for any other possible "mystery woman," as a new suspect. Within twenty-four hours of the arrest of Loud the Wakefield county and State officials felt certain that they had definitely located the woman companion of the accused and they have never abandoned that theory or attempted to shift to another possible woman accessory.

The notion that they had, and that they have been unable to find the woman in the case was undoubtedly prompted by their search for other women friends of Loud who were wanted for collateral information as to alleged duplicity in his social life.

THREATS WORK OFF CRANKS

In several quarters confusion was caused by the threatening letters received from Rhode Island and Vermont. The police are satisfied that these are the worthless communications of cranks. Dozens of such epistles are received in every capital case. The State authorities have not attached the slightest importance to these letters.

The prosecution is now advancing along a clear-cut course. Officials were reported today to be cheered by late information. The nature of the new evidence has not been disclosed. Important conference have been held.

District Attorney Tufts interrogated several other witnesses.

Surveys and photographs of the scene of the murder, of Loud near Castle Rock where Loud's sedan car was found abandoned and other points vital to the case of the State were made. Failure to find the missing 45-calibre revolver in the lake, pond and adjacent territory, caused Chief Kerr and Inspector Fahy to hunt for the death weapon in every gold watch in culverts on Elm and Linden streets, Melrose. Today culverts in border street and Stratford road will be searched.

Girl Who Broke Troth May Keep Gifts

Miss Frances Ludwig of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Joseph H. Nesson, Harvard junior. A New York judge dismissed Nesson's suit to recover gifts, including an engagement ring, which he gave Miss Ludwig during their betrothal, on the ground that she was below the legal age when the engagement contract was made.

New York, April 21.—Her mother furnished the money for the engagement ring which Joseph H. Nesson, Harvard student, asked the court to return to him from Miss Frances Ludwig, after their betrothal had been broken, Miss Ludwig testified at the hearing of Nesson's suit. She lives with her mother on Hayenagor street, Brooklyn.

"He was living with his parents in Cambridge," she told the court, "when he suggested that we marry. When I asked what we were to live on he said that we could have one furnished room and I could support him until he completed his college course. I am not the girl to support any man and I told him would better break everything off."

Nesson also asked the return of another diamond ring, a fraternity pin, Harvard insignia ring, some initiation pins, a fountain pen and a gold coin. He estimated that his gifts to Miss Ludwig represented $289.50. The court dismissed the suit on the ground that the engagement contract was made when Miss Ludwig was below legal age and she could not legally be bound by its terms.

BRYAN DIRECTS FIGHT OF 'DRYS'

Declares Palmer's Edict Would Convert Drugstores Into Open Saloons.

Washington, April 21.—Reorganization plans now being considered by the new administration contemplate the transfer of prohibition enforcement from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice, it was officially announced today by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

By International News Service.

Washington, April 21.—The "drys" today swung into action for a finish fight to prevent beer and wine sales on doctors' prescriptions. Congress is their objective.

The drys, led by William Jennings Bryan, charged that the opinion drafted for the Treasury by former Attorney-General Palmer before he left office was the "opening wedge of the wets to restore the liquor traffic."

Colonel Bryan was particularly bitter. He said the Palmer opinion authorizing beer and wine sales would transform drugstores into wide-open saloons. With other prohibition leaders, Bryan urged congress to make a vigorous drive at once upon the administration to "kill" the Palmer edict and to halt the issuance of beer and wine regulations.

From the Treasury came word that Secretary Mellon, with general supervision in prohibition enforcement affairs, would decline to have a review made of the opinion under attack, but would proceed at once to promulgate the regulations, placing beer and wine on the market for sale to those legally entitled to buy.

Asks $20,000 for Loss of Taste and Smell

Claiming that his senses of taste and smell were destroyed when he was struck by flying pieces of emery wheel, Edward A. Elliott of Rumney, N. H., has asked the United States District Court to award him $20,000 damages from Henry L. Russell of the J. Russell Company of Holyoke, who sold him the wheel. He contends that the wheel was defective. The case is being heard before Judge Morton.

Dr. A. H. Harringan of Lacenia, N. H., testified that the injuries received by Elliott were directly responsible for his loss of taste and smell and asserted that the condition would probably grow worse.

"My husband is a totally different man," said the wife of the petitioner. "He does not know whether he is eating a turkey dinner or oatmeal so far as his taste and smell are concerned."

SKEPTICAL OF BOMB SUSPECT

Flynn Demands Further Proof of Man Held for Fatal Wall Street Blast

By International News Service.

Washington, April 21.—Although three or four persons have identified Tin Liggio, now under arrest in Scranton, Pa., as the man who drove the alleged bomb wagon into Wall street shortly before the explosion last September, W. J. Flynn, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, stated today that he wants further proof that Liggio is the man wanted.

"Three or four persons who claim to have seen the dilapidated wagon drive into Wall street have identified Liggio," Chief Flynn said, "but I am not altogether certain he is the man. I would like further proof."

Liggio will not be taken to New York for the present, Flynn stated, but will be questioned in Scranton and his finger prints will be sent to New York for comparison with prints, which it is stated, were found on pieces of the wagon and the harness picked up after the explosion.

MRS. STOKES IN TEARS AT TRIAL

Displays First Emotion in Court When Mother Lauds Her Care of Children

New York, April 21—Mrs. Emma Miller, on the stand at the Stokes divorce trial, dashed with emphasis that she ever extolled in poetry the character of her son-in-law W. E. D. Stokes.

It was when Mrs. Miller told from the stand that her daughter was the "best mother in the world" that Mrs. Stokes displayed the first bit of emotion she has shown in the courtroom other than amused contempt. Mrs. Stokes pressed a handkerchief to her eyes and wept silently.

She branded absolutely false testimony of the nurse, Juliette, that she told her daughter to obtain a divorce. "I do not believe in divorce. There never has been one in our family."

She refused to identify positively a letter to Stokes in which was stated "all this talk of divorce and separation will be an influential arrangement with the great work before you."

In another letter her leaning toward poetry came out in further remarks concerning the baby, Muriel: "She is a little poem indeed, made up of atoms of its ancestors.

"Little sister was born just after sunset. What did you think of the last lingering ray caught in her hair —little red head?"

A real estate agent who rented a flat to Mrs. Weyman, testified that there saw the worldless entrance of Mrs. Weyman's apartment, among them J. Gottlieb, a druggist, of Warsaw, N. Y.

Mrs. Weyman wept lightly when letters purported to have been written by Weaver were read to the court. The widow exhibited to the court a ring which she said Weaver had bought for her.

Churches Need 'Ads,' Says Pastor

"I can sell water for gasoline right here in Boston; after people know it, they will keep on buying it, if you know how to sell it to them," declared Rev. George McNeely of Newark, N. J. at the annual conference of Bible students in Lorimer Hall.

Pastor McNeely called upon all to advertise, as this was the best means of stirring up interest in what you had. He said:

"Why, if you have got hold of the right way to advertise, it does not make any difference what you have to sell. People will be won to your goods by one way you get your ad before them.

"Advertising is the life of trade and commerce and it is about time that the churches awoke to their opportunity in this direction."

Harding Likes Music, but Not "Jazz"

Washington, April 21.—The "shimmy" music produced by the modern jazz bands, with the wailing saxophones, acrobatic drummers, and muted cornets, may have taken the country by storm, but it has no appeal to a man here in Washington whose opinions on many subjects are earnestly listened to by 105,000,000 people.

His opinion on the question of music is worthy of consideration, for he started to play in a band out in New Caledonia, Ohio.

He is the president of the United States.

Not for him are the braying trombone, clashing cymbal and all the wail Field forms for modern jazz. No, America today is toddling around innumerable dance halls. Rather the graceful strains of the "Blue Danube" or the "Merry Widow Waltz."

Investigation today disclosed that President Harding has never been able to distinguish a number played with the syncopation of modern jazz. He likes good, light music. His favorite overture is "Robin Hood." "The Bohemian Girl" and others of the type that were so popular a decade ago.

He also likes his musical dish flavored now and then with a little of the heavier stuff such as "Aida," or "Madame Butterfly."

But jazz? No.

BEGIN BUILDING IN LAWRENCE

Both Master Builders and Workmen Claim Victory Under "Open Shop"

Lawrence, April 21.—Both master builders and workmen in the building trades claim victory in the attempt to carry out "open shop" plans in this city. The employers declare that the first day under the open shop rules and the men declare the employes are defeated in their efforts to continue trade unionism in this city. Union officials declare that not a single union man has thus far surrendered his card.

Sixty pickets from union headquarters were on duty when the open shop movement began. Company sought to recruit their building forces from the ranks of non-union company properties in Andover. The contractors declare that they had all the men they could put into the work, intimating that they recruited from the union ranks.

"It is not a question of man," said Charles Alexander, secretary of the Master Builders' Association, "it is a question of the amount of work. There are plenty of men willing and ready to take the 12 per cent cut in pay and waive the union idea, providing we get the work. Building activities have not at the lowest tide in many months."

The union heads have prepared a black list of the firms which have sought to use non-union labor, which will be nearly every firm in the construction business here.

No. 2—Mysterious Death of Maurice Otterson

Sister-in-Law Acquitted of Murder Charge After Sensational Trial

Maurice Otterson, a twenty-one-year old veteran of the World War, extremely good looking, met his death by a bullet wound in the head at his home in Hooksett, N. H., on the night of November 7, 1919.

That he had been murdered was beyond a doubt.

His sister-in-law, Mrs. Marion Loynes Otterson, the wife of his brother, Howard, was arrested for the crime, but a jury adjudged her not guilty.

The Otterson family at the time of the murder consisted of five persons Mr. and Mrs. John Otterson, their eldest son, Howard, the latter's wife, Marion, and their younger son, Maurice.

Until the crime, not a word had been heard or suggestion made that conditions in the Otterson household were not as they should be. Apparently the family was a happy one.

On the evening of the murder the elder Otterson and their son Howard, left home by automobile for Manchester, nine miles away. They planned to do some shopping and later to attend a moving picture theatre.

FAIR WERE ALONE

Marion Otterson and Maurice were left as the sole occupants of the house.

They intended to leave for Manchester, later in the evening, and join the other members of the family. It had been previously arranged that if the pair were not at the place of meeting at eight thirty, Howard would call on the telephone and ascertain the reason for the delay.

Maurice was proprietor of a gasoline filling station, situated a few rods from the house and it was not unusual for him to be detained by business.

At 8:30, as per schedule, Maurice and Marion had not kept their appointment. Howard telephoned as planned and was told by a neighbor that his brother had been shot by robbers.

The neighbor, Mrs. E. L. Stewart, who informed Howard of the crime, had been attracted to the Otterson house a half hour earlier, when Marion Otterson, her hair completely disarranged and trembling with fear, had run into the roadway screaming:

"Maurice has been shot by burglars," Marion had sobbed. "They have escaped in an automobile."

DEAD ON FLOOR

Mrs. Stewart had accompanied the apparently terrified woman into the house. Fully dressed, in new clothes, Maurice Otterson was stretched dead on the living room floor.

His pockets had been turned inside out and his watch and money had been taken. An overturned chair and table mutely testified to a struggle.

Mrs. Stewart called the Manchester police and Sheriff George A. Wooster of Concord. Before they arrived Mrs. Otterson went upstairs twice. She was there when the officials arrived.

To the police Mrs. Otterson described the details of the murder.

She and Maurice had been sitting together in the living room awaiting the time for their start to Manchester, she stated. Maurice went upstairs to dress and a few minutes afterwards she got up and walked to the rear door to let the dog out.

As she opened it, she related, she was grabbed and thrown to the ground. A heavy sweater, hanging on a nail on the kitchen wall, was thrown over her head. She was held on the ground and a man whispered in her ear:

"If you move or say a word I'll kill you."

TWO GUNS FOUND.

She lapsed into unconsciousness for a brief period, and then she heard footsteps coming down the stairs. She thought they were Maurice's.

Then she heard a shuffling of feet and a shot. Then a voice, as someone passed the doorway where she lay, planned to the floor—"Hold the skirt; I'll get the car."

The police made the usual perfunctory search of the premises. Mrs. Otterson was asked if there were any firearms in the house. She told them that there was and led them to Maurice's room. She lifted up the pillow on his bed and uncovered a large army automatic revolver.

She knew of no other weapon, she stated. A half hour later, her husband having joined the searchers, a revolver was found in the bedroom that she and her husband occupied.

One bullet had been fired. Howard Otterson, a firearms salesman and an expert, was the first to pick the weapon up. Smelling the newly burned powder he identified it as the murder gun.

The revolver was his and for months it had lain in a holster, exposed to view on a bureau, where it then was. The State claimed that an attempt had been made to clean it.

MISSING RING FOUND.

Mrs. Otterson's earlier denial that she knew of the existence of this weapon placed her under suspicion.

Two days later she notified the police that her diamond engagement ring was missing. She could not remember whether she wore it the night of the murder or whether she had misplaced it before then.

A ring, similar to the one lost, was found hidden a few days after Mrs. Otterson's arrest, beneath a paper lining in a drawer in her bedroom.

The ring played a prominent part in the trial.

It had been cut to fit the finger of the wearer, a jewelry expert testified.

The Boston American publishes today the second of a series of stories recalling famous New England murder mysteries, of which the slaying of Patrolman James A. Preston of the Wakefield police threatens to become the most baffling.

Circumstantial evidence, as in almost every famous case, plays a most important part in the Preston mystery. This kind of evidence was the only kind produced at the trial of Mrs. Marion Loynes Otterson, charged with the murder of her brother-in-law, Maurice Otterson, at Hooksett, N. H.

In some particulars the Preston case and the Otterson case are parallel. The Otterson case was unique inasmuch as the State did not attempt to prove a motive, an almost unheard-of feature in a murder trial.

Defense Claimed Young War Veteran Was Slain by Bandits

fied, and only the first three or four numerals of the ring's number were intelligible. These figures, according to the jeweler from whom Howard Otterson admitted he bought his wife's engagement ring, were the first figures of a ring sold from his store.

That fact and the murder gun features formed the principal structure on which the government built its case.

STATE'S CONTENTIONS.

Attorney General Young argued at length on these features:

"How did the burglar get upstairs to get the revolver without disturbing Maurice?" he asked.

"If he did, why did he return it?

"Maurice did not bring it down. If he wanted a weapon he would have brought his own. If he did carry the one owned by his brother and lost it in a struggle with the robber, how is it that the murderer knew just where to return it?"

These were the essential facts and interrogations on which the State asked the jury to convict Marion Otterson for the murder of Maurice, her brother-in-law.

Her handit story was ridiculed by the State, which claimed her bruises and scratches received in the supposed struggle with the murderers were self-inflicted, but as to motive the prosecution was silent.

The case did not convince the jury. Marion Otterson was freed and today, apparently happy, the Otterson family is reunited, with but the one exception—Maurice.

The murder remains unsolved.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief For Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache and inability to retain food, are in probably nine cases out of ten simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

This distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressed, bloated feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble then extends to the excess development of acid in the intestines.

To stop or prevent this source of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever sour, sluggish or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antacid, such as Bisurated Magnesia, which may be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form, quickly sets the stomach to rights work properly without the aid of artificial digestants. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

Jazz Hath No Charms for Inmates of Zoo

New York, April 21.—Learned scientists from universities and museums gathered at the zoo in New York's famous Central Park, a few blocks from General Bolivar's statue where the President spoke Tuesday.

The professors were trying out jazz music on the wild animals in the menagerie.

The principal contribution to science from the experiment was that the professors discovered that the lions, tigers, hippopotami, leopards, monkeys, buffaloes and bears gave as much heed to the original Dixie Jazzers as the statue of General Bolivar and his horses did to the rhetorical flights of President Harding about the Monroe doctrine.

Ancient and wrinkled elephants, long accustomed to do tank town parades ahead of a steam calliope, were the only ones present that seemed to give two whoops for the stirring strains of the alcoholic blues and other cabaret selections.

The only other demonstration was made by a vicious leopard, who tried in vain to break out of his cage and attack the band when they serenaded him with "Lead Kindly Light." No hymns for him.

Columbia University professors who were present and Dr. Reed Blair, of the Bronx Zoo, said that conditions were not ideal for the test, and that perhaps the animals were nervous about showing their appreciation of the music the first time they heard it.

Says Husband Wanted Laborer, Not Wife

Claremont, N. H., April 21. — Mrs. Dora E. S. Green, whose husband is suing Woolcot G. Sobolewsky for alienation of her affections, has broken all precedent in such cases by admitting she likes the defendant, but declares he did not steal her affection for Green, further she had none.

Mrs. Green charges that her husband married her to get a housekeeper and farm laborer, not a wife.

She also charges cruelty, exhibits a scar on her hand which she says was caused by a mirror he threw at her, and alleges he did not spend more than $5 on clothes for her in the years she lived with him.

Sobolewsky is young, as is Mrs. Green, while Green is a middle-aged farmer. He is suing his alleged rival for $2,000.

SUES FOR $20,000 FOR LOSING SENSE OF TASTE

Inability to distinguish the taste of chicken from that of oatmeal is the basis of a suit in the Federal District Court in which Edward A. Elliott of Rumney, N. H., is suing the proprietor of the J. Russell Company for $20,000 for alleged injuries received from the bursting of an emery wheel he bought from the defendant company. He says he lost his sense of smell and taste.

The Railway Mail Clerks' Association of Boston celebrated their first ladies' night at the Huntington Chambers. Several musical and specialty acts were enjoyed, followed by dancing.

The committee in charge included C. L. Luckenback, president of the organization; J. J. Grant, first vice-president; Edward J. Winston, secretary, and William E. Rice, general chairman.

LEYDEN CITIZENS BACK TEACHER

Declare Attacks Upon Her Character by Rev. Mr. Carroll Unwarranted

Leyden, April 21.—Declaring above approach the character and reputation of the teacher recently assailed by Rev. Walter Carroll in the Greenfield court, Leyden citizens at a public meeting adopted a resolution pledging her their support.

The minister was sentenced to imprisonment for refusing to send his children to the public school where the woman taught. After a day in jail, however, he was released on payment of a fine.

The citizens took exception to Rev. Mr. Carroll's statements and asserted that during the teacher's seventeen years residence here she had done nothing to warrant the attack.

SAYS HENS, DOGS, ROAMED ON WOMAN'S DEATHBED

Fitchburg, April 21.—The deathbed of Miss Marian M. Putnam, who died two years ago, was a "regular barnyard," over which cats, dogs and hens roamed at will. This testimony was given at the opening of the contest over the will of Miss Putnam, in the local probate court before Judge Chamberlain. Miss Putnam left most of her property to the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Dr. E. L. Fisk, testifying for the contestants, said the dead woman refused any medicine.

BUILDERS RUSH TO BUREAU

Employers Say They Cannot Place Great Flood of Applicants

More aplicants for work on new Boston buildings are registering at the employment bureau of the Building Trades Employers Association, No. 166 Devonshire street, than can be placed, according to Secretary John F. Welch, who says that only 600 out of 1,000 who have applied could be placed. Unless material prices come down, he said, advertising may be discontinued as there is no help shortage but one of contracts, owners holding up work despite the reduction of 10 per cent. in labor cost. Plasterers and plumbers are still wanted, he said.

The strike committee of the Building Trades Council will continue to picket the bureau and all jobs and has postponed the mass meeting scheduled for tomorrow on the Common until Monday owing to delay in securing the permit.

Do You Know a Baby Sick With Constipation

NO thoughtful mother with children in the house will risk being without a good, reliable laxative. It will save many a serious illness, many a doctor's visit.

When the baby cries and is fretful, when the boy has no appetite and won't play, when the girl is listless and feverish, when there are complaints of headaches and colds, the mother can suspect constipation. Give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in the small dose prescribed on the bottle, when you put the child to bed, and with morning the ailment will have disappeared.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a popular compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. It acts gently and mildly, and children take it without objection. A sixty-cent bottle is enough to last an average family many months. The ingredients are endorsed in the U. S. Pharmacopoeia, and last year American mothers bought over eight million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from druggists. It is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, and few cautious families are ever without it.

"Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, calluses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness—no more foot torture.—Advertisement.

TRAIN YOUR HAIR AS AN ACTRESS DOES

No class of people devotes as much time to beauty culture as actresses, and no class must be more careful to retain and develop their charms. Instructive privilege the information that in hair care they find it dangerous to shampoo with any make-shift hair preparation. They indignantly say that to have the best hair wash and scalp stimulator all a cost of about three cents, one need only get a package of cantrex from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Then after its use the hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are quickly dissolved and entirely disappear when you rinse the hair. After this your hair will be so fluffy it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—Adv.

Washing Won't Rid Head Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three of four more applications will completely and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will take on lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—Advertisement.

AIDES CLEARED BY BRIGHTWELL

Charles Fred Meyers and W. R. Bouchie Only Employes, He Testifies

Special Assistant Attorney General William Flaherty concluded his cross-examination of Charles M. Brightwell, President of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, who with thirteen other defendants, is on trial in the Superior Criminal Court before Judge Fessenden and a jury on an indictment charging conspiracy to steal.

In answer to Daniel J. Daley, counsel for William R. Bouchie, cashier of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, Brightwell said that he considered debentures issued by the company similar to shares of stock. Bouchie never took part in the conferences leading up to the formation of the company, and he was merely a paid employe.

Brightwell said he had great confidence in Bouchie and never inspired with him to defraud Brightwell was shown recent newspaper quotations of foreign exchange, and in answer to Attorney Daley, Brightwell said that foreign exchange is much higher now than a month ago. After his arrest Brightwell said he received a cablegram from London asking that $50,000 be sent to a bank in Paris and expressed confidence that he could raise 10 per cent, profit.

GERMANY ASKS HARDING'S AID

Will Abide by Decision if President Can Mediate Reparation Dispute

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, April 21.—With the shadow of France's mailed fist ready to strike the blow which may smash Germany economically, Germany took an unusual step today.

Declaring that it was speaking in the name of the people of Republican Germany, the German government, according to what seems reliable information, made a direct appeal to the President of its "sister republic," the United States.

The appeal is to a country with which Germany is "still at war," pleading with it to mediate the question of reparations with the countries with which it is already at peace.

The appeal was made to President Harding to endeavor to gain the consent of the Allied powers to his mediation

Foreign Minister Simons is reported to have given to Commissioner Dresel the direct appeal to the American President. The American commissioner was asked to transmit the appeal to Washington.

To remove any possible doubt as to her sincerity, Germany, it is understood, pledges her faith to carry out and fulfill in a better spirit the provisions of any award made by President Harding.

NEW IMPETUS IN IRISH RELIEF

Cardinal's Letter Stimulates Greater Efforts to Aid Suffering People

Tremendous impetus was given the campaign for funds for the relief of the suffering people of Ireland by Cardinal O'Connell's letter of approval, as was evidenced by the returns of the past few hours.

Many rallies have been held, other activities in behalf of the drive started and a number of committees throughout the State are winding up intensive campaigns and reporting that they have far exceeded the mark they set when they began.

Tonight the Dorchester district will be a great many entertainments for the relief fund

Additional contributions have been received, among which are the following: William C. N. Healey, chairman of the East Boston district committee for relief in Ireland, sent in a check for $1,000 as the first contribution from the residents in his district.

Robert F. Herrick of Milton contributed $1100. He may be found at 66 State street, Boston, also forwarded a check for $1000.

A whist party given by Miss Mary Donovan, Annie North and the Misses Duffy at St. Joseph's Hall, West End, netted $285.

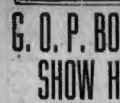
Hapgood Analyzes Colombian Treaty Vote That Bodes Ill for Party

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.

Washington, April 21.—The vote on the Colombian treaty today had an interest for the Senate and for politicians generally quite separate from the interests that stood out openly. To the public the things involved were our amicable relations with our neighbors, the expense of $25,000,000, the history of Theodore Roosevelt, and the importance of oil in the modern world.



Norman Hapgood.

To the Senate it was the first test of the power of the steam roller in the new administration. It was the first opportunity to measure the strength of insurgency that may be applied within the Republican party to various questions on the horizon.

Notice was clearly served that this was "a case of must." Any Republican who voted against the treaty must do so at the cost of being stamped unorthodox, as not a good Indian. Senator Norris expressed the issue when he said: "I do not care how any man votes on the treaty as an original question. What I do object to is the political system by which a man is expected to vote against a treaty because it is introduced by President Wilson and for the same treaty because it is introduced by President Harding.

Most of the Democrats naturally voted for the treaty, since it was originally a Wilson measure.

LODGE FOR IT AS G. O. P. ACT.

As the vote on the original treaty was in secret session, it is not possible to compare the total vote today with that when it was a Wilson measure. A good line is given, however, by the minority report of the Foreign Relations Committee. As that committee was then Democratic, it reported the treaty favorably. Senator Knox also voted favorably on his vote today was entirely consistent.

Senator Lodge, then minority leader, voted against it. When the duty of leading the fight for it as a Republican measure fell on him he tried to have this vote also taken in secret session, but failed.

Borah voted against it then, and kept his record consistent by voting against it when his own party introduced it.

McCumber, Brandegee and Fall voted against it then and were in favor of it this time.

Secretary Fall, by the way, then senator, is a storm centre in the present situation. It is freely rumored that Secretary Hughes has shown serious offense at Secretary Fall's rushing into his territory in the letter written to Senator Lodge and made public by him, containing an attack on a foreign government. Mr. Hughes has two grounds of complaint, one is the question of intrusion into his provinces. The other is on the question of fact.

PARTY SHOWN AS INSECURE.

Great Britain has explicitly denied that she owns one share of stock in the Mexican and Dutch oil companies specified by Secretary Fall. Secretary Hughes was easily the leader of the New York bar when he entered the cabinet, and he was known for the thoroughness with which he got up his cases. It would give him no pleasure to be put in the position of having to conduct delicate foreign complications on a shaky basis of fact.

To illustrate this quality it is related in certain circles that before he would tell the Yap question, which he hasn't been handling so skilfully, he wanted an hour's documentary séance that President Wilson had never waived that point. He got it, and when the French charge was rude that the former President had waived it our comeback was consive.

The Republicans who voted against the administration today will bear watching on the tax bills, the tariff, and the foreign treaties to be negotiated.

Senator Mcrmick, who was not among the Colombian hotsers, has already given notice that he will wage a hard fight against the sales tax.

Today, to put briefly, the Republican leaders hitting their first controverted point on a policy of the preceding administration, passed the primrose path of cordial welcome to the long has path of their own responsibility. On that path they found an opposition more serious than two weeks ago seemed possible.

THE MOTION PICTURE WORLD

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

THERE was something ironic in the choice of Allen Holubar's newest special film, "Man, Woman, Marriage," for a showing in the Ludlow street jail of New York. War it gives for entertainment pure and simple, or was it intended as a lecture for the famous Alimony Club of that institution?

Whatever the reason for the showing, it "took." Sheriff Knott of the jail is in danger of losing his "guests," for since the picture was run off there on Saturday, one conscience-stricken member of the club has decided to pay up his back alimony as the court decreed and so gain his liberty. Others in the jail are considering the same course, it's announced.

Dorothy Phillips, the wife of Mr. Holubar, starred in "Man, Woman, Marriage" at the jail on Saturday. Whether or not the moral of the film made any impression on them, Miss Phillips did. Any credit for their reform, the club members want it understood, should go to the film and to her playing on the screen.

TO BAR GERMAN FILMS.

AS a sequel to the story on German films in yesterday's column, comes the news that the importation of such pictures would be fought. Independent producers, led by John Emerson, scenario-writer, president of the Actors' Equity Association, are preparing to appeal to Congress to put a stop to the showing of these Teuton productions.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Company, stated on his return from Europe some weeks ago that Germany has forbidden the importation of more than two per cent. of films made in this country. There is to be no discrimination against German films aside from the fact that until the embargo is lifted not our pictures, none of theirs are to be exhibited here.

In Canada "Passion" was stopped by an organization of mothers whose sons had been killed in war. The Germans are offering their films as low as $2,000 in order to have them shown in this country. It has been pointed out that unless Germany can pick up her trade with other countries, she won't be able to pay her war debt. The only objection at present is that she wants to pick up her foreign trade and at the same time restrict foreign trade to her country.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" REVIVED.

TO show that even Griffith's earlier films can stand comparison with present-day production and "come out smiling," they are to revive his famous "Birth of a Nation" the first week in May at the Capitol Theatre in New York. There are many who didn't see the film when it was shown before and many more who are looking forward to seeing it again. It is a question whether it will come to this city, for there are too few theatres to hold these large productions. With "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" coming on May 2 at Tremont Temple and "Deception" waiting for an opening, there is little opportunity for the Griffith film.

"The Birth of a Nation," it will be remembered, has nearly 5,000 scenes, was made with 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses, and took eight months to complete. Among the players who appear are Henry Walthall, Ralph Lewis, Lillian Gish, Miriam Cooper, Mae Marsh, Wallace Reid, Mary Alden, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Joseph Hansberry, Walter Long and the late Bobby Harron.

WHO SAID "HARD TIMES"

MOVIE producers are howling over the slump in the film industry. In th midst of the wailing comes this cheerful announcement from the Pathe office.

During the past year that company made a clear gain of $14,760,000. The year before they made $9,500,000, and two years ago they made $4,375,000.

SUCH IS FAME.

ONE may be a Person of Importance in New York, but when it comes to Rochester, N. Y., it's quite another thing. Thomas Meighan and Eugene O'Brien went to that city a few days ago and paid a visit to the Mayor. The City Hall was crowded with enthusiastic fans and the entire place was in an uproar.

As these two screen idols stood on the steps of the City Hall and had their pictures taken a City Hall official, who had just come, elbowed his way to the front rank of bystanders and then inquired in a stage whisper: "Who are they, the two politicians from Albany?"

ANOTHER STAGE RECRUIT

JOSEPH Schildkraut, the European actor who made such a hit when he appeared in this city some months ago in "Pagans," has decided to become a movie star. While he is appearing on Broadway in "Lilliom" he will make "The Picture of Dorian Gray." John Barrymore intended to film this story of Oscar Wilde's, but decided against it because of its similarity to "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

CAMERA CLICKS

VIRGINIA Valli is playing opposite Bert Lytell in "A Trip to Paradise," the film version of "Lilliom," in which Schildkraut and Eva LeGallienne, daughter of the poet, Richard Le Gallienne, are starring in the stage play.

GEORGE Melford has begun work on his production for Paramount of E. Phillips Oppenheim's popular story, "The Great Impersonation," in which James Kirkwood will be featured. Ann Forrest will play the leading role opposite him. Miss Forrest has recently recovered from an operation for appendicitis.

CECIL DeMille has gone on location for the first scenes of his next production, the title of which hasn't been decided on. The cast will include Dorothy Dalton, Mildred Harris, Conrad Nagle and Theodore Kosloff.

GOVERNOR J. A. C. Preus of Minnesota, announces a press representative saw his first movie the other day when a George Nelson picture was shown in Minneapolis. The only remark left to make is "Where has Governor Preus been for the past ten years?"

BOMBSHELL IN ALLIED CAMP

U. S., Belgium and Italy Unrepresented at Hythe Conference

London, April 21.—Belgium, Italy and the United States will be without representation at the conference at Hythe Saturday, the Foreign Office announced this afternoon.

The Foreign Office specifically denied cabled reports from Washington that the United States was to participate in the conference.

Occasion was also taken to deny the rumor that British troops were involved in the plans for an advance into the Ruhr Valley.

The announcement came as a bombshell to political and diplomatic circles, for it completely overturns all previous plans.

The Hythe conference is thus reduced to a dialogue between Premiers Lloyd George and Briand, whereas the announced program had called for a thorough discussion of all big questions by representatives of the four chief European allies: France, Britain, Belgium and Italy.

Premier Briand was to submit to them the complete plans France has mapped out for coercing Germany to meet the reparations demands on or immediately after May 1. It has been apparent for days that Italy viewed the prospect of fresh military action against the Germans with misgivings and that Lloyd George was opposed to it for practical reasons. Belgium alone was understood to favor whole-hearted approval of and co-operation with the French plans.

CAMP DEVENS TROOPS ON FOUR-DAY MARCH

The 12th infantry, under command of Colonel F. S. L. Price, left Camp Devens today at daybreak for a four-day practice march and maneuvers. They will camp at the camp site on Cranberry Pond near Harvard, a distance of about seven miles from Camp Devens. Over a thousand troops will participate.

SCHOONER BLUENOSE SAILS FOR BANKS

Halifax, N. S., April 21.—The schooner Bluenose, prospective challenger for the International Fishermen's trophy, has sailed for the fishing banks, where she will put in a season's fishing required to make her eligible for the elimination races to be sailed off Halifax next Fall.

Blames Women for Immodest Garb

Chicago, April 21.—"Women themselves, I am afraid, are responsible for the alarming growth of disrespect for women." This is the statement of Bishop Thomas Nicholson of Chicago, who addressed a Methodist preachers' meeting here.

"The shocking immodesty of woman's dress, it seems to me, has become a question of national import. Why can we not have an American style which would be chaste, modest and in keeping with our American dignity and our American traditions?" Bishop Nicholson asked, deploring the "Parisian styles."

COUNT'S SLAYER NEAR ARREST

Police on Trail of Man Whose Cap Lay Near Von Pickler's Body

Atlantic City, N. J., April 21.—Two detectives have left for Philadelphia, where they expected to make an arrest in connection with the slaying of Count von Heinrich von Pickler, related to the von Ruslow family in Germany, who was found murdered here late Thursday.

The man sought is declared to be the owner of the cap found beside the body of von Pickler, who, during his residence of twenty-six years in this country, went under the name of Henry Buehler and was employed as a hotel clerk.

The police are said to be working on the theory that von Pickler may have been killed by a fellow German as the outgrowth of von Pickler's alleged refusal to join the German secret service here during the war.

E. C. Gaskill, county prosecutor said he believed a woman might have had a hand in instigating von Pickler's death.

"A certain young woman disappeared after von Pickler's body was found," he said.

ANDOVER SUSPECT ON PAROLE FROM PRISON

Lawrence, April 21.—The fingerprint department of the local police has ascertained that John Doherty, recently arrested in connection with a break into one of the coal houses of the American Woolen Company at Andover has a state prison record and is on parole. Although held for the grand jury it is now probable that he will be returned to state prison. In 1916 he did time for carrying burglar tools. He was serving another term in state prison for breaking and entering in 1918 when paroled in 1919.

OILS FEATURE THE MARKET

Motors Are Another Strong Group During Forenoon; Rails Firm and Steels Down

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, but most of them were above their lowest level of the forenoon. Oils and motors were strong, attracting the leading interest. Among issues to sell at year highs were, Cosden, Transcontinental, Sinclair and Dome Mines. U. S. Food Products sold at a new low for 1921. Lee Higginson firm all the morning and steels stayed in touch.

The market was active, first hour sales approximating 175,000 shares. Call money opened at 6½ per cent. Foreign exchange was weak, sterling, francs and lire all declining. Demand sterling went as low as 3.92¼. Atlantic Gulf, Sumatra and General Asphalt were especially weak issues.

In the instance of most stocks prices were lower at the opening and there was enough selling pressure to cause a continuous recession for about twenty minutes. Early losses ranged from fraction to about two points. Steels were the weakest group and oils the strongest. Low-priced motion issues made the largest gains, Cosden advancing three points before the end of an hour. High priced oils were rather weak. Crucible showed the largest loss among steels, others advanced as a rule, while equipments followed steels downward and tires failed to reflect the strength of automobile shares. Rails were quiet, but the active ones ruled firm. The little trading done in coppers showed they will have support. The market on the whole was a repetition of that of yesterday. It was irregular after rallying and without interesting incidents.

TRADERS HESITATE.

Traders hesitated over committing themselves. Recent events are conflicting in their effect upon the valuation of securities. The call rate is lower, money being obtainable in the outside market yesterday as low as 5 per cent. It is regarded that steel production is still decreasing, but that in other manufacturing lines improvement can be seen. This is practically true of the tire and automobile industries. The railroad report of an increase in revenue-car loadings is the most encouraging of its kind in several months. But dividend omissions and poor corporation reports serve to offset hopes encendered by favorable factors. The bear crowd is no longer aggressive, but still active and exceedingly alert. Action in tariff legislation and tax revision and uncertainty as to what the Labor Board will do about wage reductions are also elements supporting uncertainty. A dragging market for several weeks is looked for by many observers.

REDUCED CALL RATE MAKES STOCKS STRONGER

By BROADAN WALL

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

New York, April 21.—A decline in the call money rate to six per cent. on the floor of the Stock Exchange with demand loans made outside of that institution as low as five per cent. was accountable for any strength in the stock market yesterday during the greater part of the session. Profit taking toward the close caused quotations to ease off from the best but the undertone was steady. Trading was the lightest for any session so far this week, only slightly more than 600,000 shares changing hands.

Strength in sugars was accompanied by an advance of more than a dollar a bale in cotton and a gain of from two to nearly four cents a bushel in wheat.

The foreign exchange market also showed strength owing to the steady shipments of gold which are being made from all parts of Europe to the United States.

Speculation continued active in the low priced oils as advancing prices, several new high prices for this movement being recorded.

Leather Trade Improving

More demand for leather is reported at Chicago and it is stated that Western shoe retailers are ordering shoes for Fall delivery earlier than usual.

Newburyport, Mass., has awarded a temporary loan of $100,000, dated April 22 and maturing Sept. 30, 1921, at 5.10 per cent. discount, to Merchants National Bank of Newburyport.

Medway, Mass., has awarded to Harris, Forbes & Co., at 5.92 per cent. a $50,000 temporary loan in anticipation of revenue, dated April 20.

Watertown, Mass., has sold to the Union Market National Bank of Watertown, at 5 per cent. discount, plus $1.50 premium, a temporary loan of $100,000, dated April 20, matures November 30, and $100,000 December 19, 1921.

TRADING QUIET IN BOSTON

Local Market Narrow and Dull; Curb More Active and Gains the Rule

The Boston market was irregular from the outset and it was also narrow as regards fluctuations and trading. It was as devoid of feature during the forenoon as at any time this year. Coppers were irregular, but not many were dealt in. Packing issues were firm and were not active. Rails were not in evidence, with the exception of Boston & Maine. It opened unchanged. Metropolitan Investment was the leader and advanced a fraction. Next in prominence was Waldorf, which also made a small gain. United Drug common and Barnsdall advanced a point on a few transactions. American Tobacco common dropped 1¼ on a first-hour sale.

Among issues to make fractional gains were Old Dominion, North Butte, United Fruit, Ventura, Elder, Lowe's Theatres, Swift International and Warren Bros. preferred.

Among stocks to recede a little were American Telephone, American Woolen preferred, Boston Elevated, Fairmont & Arizona, Copper Range, United Shoe, Carson Hill, National Leather, Punta and Punta Alegre.

CURB ISSUES ADVANCE.

The Curb market was active at the start and it was strong also, early prices being from a fraction to about two to one. Leaders were Arizona Silver, Boston & Montana, Eureka Stocks to rise at once included Boston Ely, Empire Food, Eureka, Mutual serial, South American Trona, Tonopah and United Verde Extension. Losses on initial sales were recorded against Arizona Silver, Boston & Montana and Palmade.

At the end of an hour Mutual was up 1-16 at 1⅛, Gulfport 3 cents at 7 cents and Texana half a cent at 3 cents. Among decliners were Boston & Montana 2 cents at 80 cents and Eureka 4 cents at 60, after selling as low as 53 cents. Arizona Silver had recovered its loss.

PROBE OF OTHER DEPARTMENTS MAY FOLLOW O'DALY'S ARREST

CITY AUDITORS TRYING TO LOCATE SHORTAGE

thorough investigation of other departments is to follow his amazing confession.

The police admit that the case is one of the most puzzling with which they have been called upon to deal. None of the details of O'Daly's defalcations are known. They await his complete recovery.

His appearance in court followed his arrest at his home, 11 Hillcrest street, Dorchester. Bail of $30,000 was promptly furnished at police headquarters by Joseph O'Connell, head of a brick, lime and cement contracting firm, and Ransom Rowe, president of the Rowe Contracting Company.

Upon his arrival at police headquarters O'Daly sat with Police Inspector Wahle and Bail Commissioner Joseph Fahey in the office of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation until his bondsmen arrived. He gave his age as 46 years.

O'Daly was brought from his Dorchester home in a limousine owned by Sheriff Kelher and driven by John J. Ferry, a deputy. Thirty minutes after his arrival at headquarters he emerged, holding a duster, coat to his head to thwart the photographers. He returned to the home at once in the sheriff's automobile.

Mayor Peters acted stunned by the revelations of theft for stock gambling purposes made by O'Daly, whom he had selected as city treasurer to succeed Thomas W. Murray, resigned. O'Daly went into the office a young man, succeeding his father as messenger 25 years ago.

Auditors are still checking up to determine from what funds O'Daly took the money, as he was in a state bordering on nervous collapse when his brokenly admitted he had violated his position of trust.

He is still under the care of a physician, although reported to be in better shape after the mental relief afforded by his confession.

The Mayor declared that no less than half a dozen men prominent in busines and banking circles had taken the trouble to write him letters endorsing O'Daly for the position and declaring his appointment would be for the best interests of the city.

And then came the startling exposure.

Auditors were called in to go over the books by City Auditor J. Alfred Mitchell, as is the custom annually and sometimes semi-annually. The audit was under way when the resignation of Mr. Murray's resignation and his announced intention to enter banking as vice-president of one of the largest trust companies in the State.

The auditors were to go over all the accounts so that O'Daly would start with a clean slate.

On Wednesday of last week they ran across items totaling $40,000 listed as court judgments against the city, according to the reports they made to Mayor Peters.

THEFTS IN 3 ADMINISTRATIONS

They were puzzled to trace the actual payments, but still suspected nothing wrong.

After two days of baffling endeavor, City Treasurer Murray called in to Cashier O'Daly and asked him sharply for having his accounts in such shape. O'Daly replied confusedly, went to his desk and went home.

The treasurer's suspicions aroused, the investigation was pressed all the harder. O'Daly was called upon for an explanation. Controlling his emotions with visible effort O'Daly made a confession to his old friend Auditor J. Alfred Mitchell.

He told Mitchell he was to leave his $4,200 job as cashier and step into the coveted $5,500 position as treasurer, he is a broken and discredited man.

How much of the loss the Massachusetts Bonding Company can be called upon to make up, Mayor Peters was unable to state. He said that President Thomas J. Falvey said the company stood ready to meet its obligations. O'Daly was bonded for $50,000.

How much the city will get back will depend upon the amounts O'Daly took in the different years when different companies went on his bonds. Each company bonding him is liable up to the amount of the bond for the sum taken in that year, it was stated.

City Auditor Mitchell declared that he did not believe the failure to detect the thefts, which have been going on during the administrations of Mayors Fitzgerald, Curley and Peters, did not reflect upon his office or the system of auditing.

HOME MORTGAGED.

There was much criticism of the system of auditing by outside firms, however, and it is declared that City Treasurer Murray made many radical changes in the methods upon taking office four years ago. This is both affirmed and denied by interested officials.

It is stated that it was customary to go over one set of books at a time and that this gave the employes last examined chance to cover up discrepancies between cash receivable and payable by borrowing money from those already examined.

When the examination now still under way was begun, however, enough auditors came in to take over all the books at once.

Treasurer Murray will continue to act in that capacity until Mayor Peters selects his successor. O'Daly's name was withdrawn from the Civil Service Commission to whom it was sent for approval.

Another Cashier Took $89,000 in 1880

Though the city treasurer's office handles from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000 in a year the losses to the city of Boston through dishonest employes in the past forty years have been small.

It was forty years ago that John A. Woodward, then cashier, absconded with $89,000 of city funds. The money was paid practically all taken from the sinking funds.

Woodward disappeared and was believed to have gone to South America. Nothing was ever heard of him and it is believed that he is dead.

As with other employes of the treasurer's office, Woodward was bonded and his bondsmen made good $60,000 of the loss.

The theft was committed during the administration of Mayor Frederick O. Prince, and an investigation afterward revealed that the then city treasurer, he is a broken and discredited man, had left in blank on the Merchants National Bank.

Woodward filled in the sum made payable to bearer or purchased debt. He left town in October, 1880.

BILL AGAINST RAIDING AUTOISTS IS REJECTED

The Senate rejected the Bauer bill which would have imposed heavy penalties on persons using automobiles to raid farms and orchards. Senator Gibbs of Waltham and Senator McDonald of Boston, opposed the bill, saying that no class lines should be drawn between drivers with automobiles and those without, and that there were already enough laws on the statute books.

BETROTHED?

Mrs. Elizabeth Dougherty, who says she is engaged to "Garry" Herrmann.

Chicago, April 21.—Friends of August (Garry) Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati baseball club, today discredited his reported engagement to Mrs. Elizabeth A. Dougherty of this city, widow of a wealthy contractor. Nevertheless Mrs. Dougherty said that the wedding was scheduled to take place. "Garry" insisted that the announcement was "premature to say the least."

Mrs. Dougherty is a baseball fan and attends nearly all the games here. Mr. Herrmann gave a dinner in Cincinnati, she says, for a few friends and it was then, according to Mrs. Dougherty, that the engagement was announced.

Herrmann declares that it is all a joke.

PROBERS DEFIED BY CAVANAGH

Ex-Senator Challenges Right to Publish Bank Records in "L" Scandal

and testified to what I knew of the charges under inquiry, but I insist that this committee has not a scintilla of right to the publication of this information.

"Furthermore, I challenge the authority of this committee to investigate a matter now in the possession of a preceding Legislature. Each Legislature is supreme to itself, and the Legislature of 1921 had no right to make the inquiry into the actions of a former Legislature."

Asked if he had any objection to the writing into the record of the information possessed by the special auditor, Edwin L. Pride, Mr. Cavanagh said:

"Not at all. What I object to is the publication."

Told that he should apply for an injunction if he doubted the authority of the committee, Cavanagh replied:

"This inquiry started when the Lieutenant Governor asked for information. Some of you said, 'He may have other political aspirations. Let's get busy and beat him to an investigation.' That is what you have done."

The hearing drew a big crowd. Edwin T. McKnight and Martin Lomasney were on hand.

Despite Cavanagh's objections the committee went right ahead. Mr. Pride was called to the stand. The first note he read was for $14,875.01, made out to Hazen, and secured by 410 shares of Boston Elevated stock. It was dated April 26, 1913, and Mr. Pride, hearing out the statement made by Mr. Taft at yesterday's session, and refuting the claim by Cavanagh that the date was May 14, 1918.

CAMBRIDGE MAN HELD FOR RAILROAD THEFT

Dennis Gallagher, twenty-nine years old, of No. 29 Elm street, Cambridge, waived examination in the Charlestown Court when charged with larceny of shoes, valued at $360, from the Boston & Maine Railroad, and was held in $1,000 bail by Judge Sullivan for appearance before the May term of the grand jury.

Girl in Hair Net Is Caught in Park

Philadelphia, April 21.—Guards at Fairmount Park rubbed their eyes in wonder when they saw a young woman garbed in a hair net prancing about in a secluded glen. Although the sun was warm, the guards thought the woman's attire a trifle extreme for April. She was captured after a long chase and covered with blankets.

DANCER'S $10,000 SUIT AGAINST FATHER OPENS

Lawrence, April 21.—The civil trial of Renee Bonnat, dancer and vaudeville star, against her father, Dr. Iskander Mallar of this city for $10,000, which the dancer claims is due her stepmother, now a resident of Brattleboro, Vt., relative to salary negotiators at the opening of the case. The dancer, whose name in private life is Mrs. J. W. Liddle, claims that her father sold property on Elm street, in this city, which belonged to her stepmother, and through the courts seeks to have her reimbursed.

HARTFORD DAYLIGHT ENDANGERS CHARTER

Hartford, Conn., April 21.—Suspension of the city of Hartford's charter is being sought in the General Assembly now in session at Hartford on the ground that the city's acceptance of daylight saving time is a rebellion against the state.

Reginald Wadsworth has introduced a resolution calling for suspension of the charter of any city that obeys the law, pointing out that city officials have proclaimed daylight time in violation of the state standard time law.

RUTH EAGER TO PLEASE KIDS

Babe Says This Is Reason He Is Out to Shatter Record

By BABE RUTH.

Philadelphia ought to be a good place for me to get my real start. I kicked No. 54, my last long wear of 1920, against the Athletics on September 29, and I have every intention of taking up where I left off in the Quaker city.

In fact, my last three were poled in Philly. On the 27th of September I paddled Rommell for a pair of merry-go-rounds in one game, but I'll admit he evened up a little at the Polo Grounds last week. At any rate, having wound up my home-run parade, as well as having made my last double-headed home-run in the same week at the same park, makes me look forward with pleasure to a return engagement today.

This is not a prediction, merely anticipation—Connie Mack's twirlers are no semi-pros!

Our of our first seven scheduled games this year, two were postponed by bad weather. I will it would stay clear and give me a whack at some of these pitchers before they get the kinks out of their wings. My hope is to get a running start on last year's mark by hammering out a cluster of circuit swats before May 1. So far I have just got hold of the first one and we only have ten more games before May Day.

Babe's Optics in Mid-Season Form

They say my early season batting average is good and not to worry. Well, I'm glad, because it proves my optics are in mid-season form, but outside of that I'm not satisfied. My rule is: "If you take care of your home runs your batting average will take care of itself."

Some of the sport writers are pointing out what a fat average I could run up if I would be content with shorter hits and more of them. Like five on the opening day. Listen. I'd sooner knock fifty-five home runs this season than hang up an average of .750 against a staff composed of Christy Mathewson, Grover Alexander and Walter Johnson.

You know why? On account of THE KIDS!

The kids don't give a whoop about a fellow's batting average. It isn't much more important to them than his base-running or how many assists he made in the year. What they want to know is how many HOME RUNS did he get?

Did you ever seen a bunch of kids on a sandlot, swing and swing hard. Is their guiding rule. Place hits, bunts or the correct position at the plate means nothing. The fellow who can knock that little cheap baseball the farthest is the ideal ballplayer. And they apply the same rule (of appraisal) to the professional ballplayer.

The average fan is about the same. Ask the first one you meet who has been the leading batter in the big leagues for the past few seasons. Not the American League you may get your answer because the great Ty Cobb occupied the throne so many years, but few can tell the leaders of the National.

Many would say that Cravath was the best batter in recent years, but Gavy never had a consistent average at all. Today Hornsby is on top in league. Let the terrific blows of his terrible club will make his batting rep last four years.

Look at the fame of our own Frank Baker. Out of the game two years and still as popular as always, because he is forever "Home Run" Baker. Nobody knows what his batting average used to be, but the baseball world knows that in the distant days of the Victorious Athletics Frank Baker hit a flock of home runs in a memorable World Series.

Youngsters Enthusiastic Over National Game

The kids that witnessed that series of a few years back are full fledged fans today. None remember what was done by that spectacular athlete and batter, Eddie Collins; few recall the sensational pitching of Plank and Bender, but the bruising wallops of J. Franklin Baker live and thrive as though it happened yesterday.

Watch the fans when I go to bat. They are actually happier to have me knock a foul ball high and far than a liner over second base. Yesterday they gave me a regular demonstration when I drove a sky-scraping foul over the edge of the grandstand and many another time I have heard a groan when I cracked a clean single or even a two-base hit.

And so I am determined to stay just where I am. There are plenty of more finished stars like Sisler and Speaker to provide the clouting average for American League patrons. My job is to knock 'em a mile and that's what the fans expect.

Frank Baker's fame is sufficient inducement for me to stick to following the kids that watch to follow.

LEWIS REVEALS REAL FORM

Champion Flops Orlando in Just Fifty-Five Minutes in Go Here

World's champion heavyweight wrestler Ed Lewis revealed his real form for the first time in many appearances here by quickly pinning Orlando, the young Northwestern ace to the mat in exactly fifty-five minutes with a wristlock and arm scissors in the main bout of Tuohey's tourney at the Arena.

Hitherto the champion has been content to carry his opponents along for an hour and a half or more, working on the defensive, appearing slow and always on the verge of being flopped to the deluded delight of their followers.

Jimmy Londos, the Greek heavyweight champion, put on his usual good exhibition against Alex Jarvis of New York, who substituted for Frank Tuska. Jarvis carried the grappling to the Greek with a fierce onslaught of armlocks until the latter took the aggressive and in a rapid succession of headholds dazed the Belgian into submission in 29 minutes, 46 seconds.

Tommy Record of Somerville again defeated Nick Karavas of Boston, using a head scissors and wristlock for a fifteen-minute fall. Frank Jedlinski flopped Fred Lurcin in thirteen minutes, ten seconds of an indifferent bout, and Billy Goodwin, one of the best local lightweight wrestlers, flopped Bob Waddy of Pittsburgh in nine minutes, thirty seconds.

CRIMSON RELAY MEN SHOW WORKOUT SPEED

Philadelphia, April 21—Coach "Bill" Bingham of the Harvard track team trained his fast aggregation out to Franklin Field today for the finishing touches before the start Saturday's Penn relays. "Bill" fell in himself and sprinted over the short distances finding little difficulty to stay with the

The coach was not to be outdone by Clark, a local banker and former high jumper at Harvard. After a short interval he accepted the invitation of the former athlete to take the mound out to the Harvard Club at Valley Forge next Friday.

Following a talk with the members of the track team the Harvard track mentor has decided to let the men pick extra events if they desire, so as to split even on points. The matter is up to the men if they wish to take on the extra events. Gourdin was clocked during a trial over the hundred with a favorable wind at 9 4-5 and under normal conditions he should canter in at ten seconds. Rose Pitts, who lost on a bad break in the low hurdles in his start Wednesday, showed wonderful form during [illegible] today and should encounter little difficulty in Saturday's events.

SCHOOL NINES IN HARD BATTLES

Suburban League Teams Have Merry Battle for Supremacy

By FRED G. LANE.

Activities in the Suburban League were going again on high when the eight teams that make up the league played their fourth league games today. Malden High took on the fast Somerville aggregation. Brookline played Newton at Clafin Field in Newton; Medford played Everett on their own grounds, while Cambridge Latin and Rindge Tech settled their differences at Russell Field, Cambridge.

* * *

Revere High is well supplied with pitchers, now that Barrett is again taking his regular turn in the box. In the game against Northbread he allowed but four hits and turned back right by the strike-out method.

* * *

The same can be said of Burke of Brockton, who is pitching superb ball. At times he lacks control, but manages to keep his hits scattered, tightening up when the situation looks dubious. He defeated the strong Milton Academy team, yielding but six hits in nine innings.

* * *

Huntington School crew candidates are making preparations for their mile race with the Tech freshmen on the Charles on Saturday afternoon. The boys have been working out in an "eight" in conditioning for this event. The following men were on hand yesterday: Wood, bow; Mac Ging, No. 7; Robert Huss, No. 6; Fred Huss, No. 5; Libby, No. 4; Laker, No. 3; Carnelow, No. 2; Alger, stroke, and Anthony, cox.

* * *

That the baseball team of this institution is fast rounding into shape can readily be seen by their win over Roxbury Latin. Warren, a southpaw, has all the promises of being a fine pitcher, with the proper coaching, while Waterous is showing very well behind the bat. Thompson and Temple are carrying off all batting honors, as is Coyne, who is holding the initial sack.

School Sports

Pitcher Lydon of West Roxbury High had one of those off days commonest amongst schoolboy pitchers in his game with Danvers High. He allowed but seven wild throws and hit two Danvers batsmen. Regardless of this his teammates got to Poor for a total of ten hits, most of them at the right time, that put them on the long end of the scoring.

* * *

Dedham High School nine, under the coaching of Coach Bill Sutherland, looks forward to the biggest year yet encountered by the school. The team that is to represent the school this spring has been carefully groomed by the ever-watchful "Bill," who is surprised at the way the boys have taken to the national pastime. There are seven regular veterans again playing ball with a large number of new candidates that have all the merks of promising players.

* * *

Captain Andrew Carroll, pitcher; Howard Mandeville, first base; Bill Flynn, right field; Frank Corbett, third base; John Willis, second base; Raymond McLeod, left fielder, are the veterans that played on last year's nine. Neal McLeod, Francis Foley and John Hooban are a few of the subs of last year's team that look very good as first-string material this coming season.

* * *

The new candidates to report are Lester Deuce, John Collins, Leo Collins, John Smith, George Walton, Fred Walton, Joseph Abbott, Nicholas De Salvo, Samuel Eddy, George Cory, Wendell White, Norman Grant, John Toomey, Ross Wheeler. The schedule that has been made up by Manager Allan Higgins is by no means a soft proposition, but will cause the lads of the fighting class to exert themselves to make it successful, and is as follows:

April 26—Milton at Dedham.
April 29—Roxbury at Dedham.
May 5—Braintree at Dedham.
May 7—West Roxbury at Dedham.
May 11—Stoughton at Stoughton.
May 14—Norwood at Norwood.
May 20—Framingham at Framingham.
May 28—South Boston at Dedham.
May 28—Hyde Park at Dedham.
May 31—Milton at Milton.
June 4—Norwood at Dedham.
June 14—Hyde Park at Hyde Park.

Jack Haggerty of Dorchester High proved to be the shining light in the Dorchester-English game, pulling off two homers and two triples in as many times to the plate.

* * *

Jimmy Cassell, who does the pitching for Boston College High, is at top form, as he clearly demonstrated to the St. James bunch, allowing them but three hits in nine innings. This lad will be the big snag that opposing schools will encounter.

* * *

Leary, pitcher for Newton, had very little on the ball to baffle the Cantabs in their holiday game. Coach McDonald has drilled baseball into this team to the extent they are playing with the same zeal and pep in their last of the ninth, regardless whether or not on the short or long end of the score.

CONTINENTAL TEAM IS TO OPEN ON APRIL 30

The Boston club of the Continental Baseball Association will open up with the Bachrach Giants of New York on April 30 at the Everett grounds. Manager Pope reports having the players in top-notch condition for the opening game.

COMMISSION IS TO PROBE GO

Sullivan and McDermott Will Receive an Opportunity to Be Heard

Lewis R. Sullivan and W. T. McDermott, who acted as judges at the bout between Young Montreal and Pete Herman, have been granted a hearing by the Boxing Commission. The commission was scheduled to name the date for the hearing today.

The charge was made in sporting circles following the contest that the verdict of the judges was influenced by the gamblers. Both Sullivan and McDermott declared they rendered an honest decision and they declare they are willing to have any of their actions investigated.

ASSABET CREWS ON TOP AT CONCORD

The Assabet crews defeated the Sudbury crews, 2 to 1, in the Middlesex School races.

Loos, McLean, Hoffner Promising Golfers

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Eddie Loos, George McLean and Charles Hoffner are three of the more prominent of the younger American golf professionals. They rank just behind Leo Diegel, who is undoubtedly the foremost of the younger homebreds. Diegel announced in Pinehurst that he would make the trip to England for the British open, but he is not scheduled as a member of the American international team, follow:

GEORGE McLEAN

George McLean is one of the leading young homebreds in the metropolitan district. He defeated Ted Ray in a special match at the Lido Beach course last fall. McLean is quick tempered. Apt to blow up if he has a break which causes him to take a six or more on a hole. Hardly capable of maintaining control of himself through four tight rounds in which each shot must be played with the greatest care. Noted for his quick back swing, which is the fastest of anyone playing class A golf.

EDDIE LOOS.

Eddie Loos is professional at the Ravisloe Club of Chicago. He shot remarkable golf on the Southern Pacific Coast this past Winter. He is more of a student of the game than most of the younger homebred professionals. Has been trying earnestly by study and much practice to develop his game and this has tended to make his efforts sound. Problematical what he will do under the pressure of the British open, but has the winning game of nerve in the more important American championships. A comer.

CHARLES HOFFNER

Charles Hoffner, Philadelphia homebred, has not as yet come up to expectations. Great things were expected of him after he shot a brilliant round of 72 at the open championship at Brae Burn. He has not followed it up quite as well as his supporters hoped. One of the best of the younger homebreds, nevertheless, and may yet arrive on top but not likely to do so at St. Andrews. (Tomorrow—Jock Hutchison, Jim Barnes and Freddy McLeod.)

DARO TO STAGE ALL-STAR SHOW

Gardini to Wrestle Caddock at Arena Tuesday Night; Big Zbyszko to Meet Linow

Lou Daro announced today his complete program for his all-star wrestling show which will be staged at the Boston Arena next Tuesday night. Renato Gardini, Italian wrestling star, and Earl Caddock, the "Master of a Thousand Holds," will meet in the final match which will be to a finish.

Caddock, former world's heavyweight champion, still claims the light-heavyweight title, and so Tuesday night's affair will be virtually a championship affair.

Stanislaus Zbyszko, recent conqueror of Joe Stecker, will oppose Jack Linow in another finish contest, while the third bout will feature Gahar, the Indian, and Mort Henderson. There will be popular accessments for this show.

SAM JONES RED SOX CHOICE FOR OPENING AGAINST SENATORS

DUFFY'S OUTFIT IN FIRST HOME GAME OF THE SEASON

By NICK FLATLEY.

The second act of the initiation of Frank Chance in baseball in Boston was staged today—the Red Sox opening at Fenway Park. Hughey Duffy led his athletes to the home pasture to see if the native air would remove the trouble that made the opening road trip rather sorrowful.

Walter Johnson and the Senators, who collided with the Sox at the seasonal start in the capital, were regarded as parties of the second part. As the Capitolists—like the rest of them—are out to have a big year, the home entry was in line for a real tryout for the local populace right off the barrier.

It's entirely too early yet to judge the Sox, as two of the regular infielders didn't join the ranks until after the season had started, and will not be ready to show real class for some time yet.

Governor Channing Cox was present to throw out the new union, the latest head of the state having the best arm developed on Beacon hill for some time. Mayor Peters, and the other large dignitaries of this section, were likewise among the special guests.

On the trails, the Duffys went to an even break in four bouts at Washington, then dropped both frays with the batting Yankees on the Polo Grounds. With the exception of Samuel Jones, who won the initial tilt, and who was listed to step to the peak today, the Boston pitchers have not shown much form.

The team, playing substitute line-up all through the South never had a real chance to steady down. The visit to the Potomac, which will have daily morning practice attached should give the new director a chance to get things fairly well ironed out. He should have had the oportunity earlier, but that's neither here nor there.

Scuffy McInnis hasn't had that all important conference yet, but now that he's within commuting distance of Gleason, he likely will force a showdown. The mixup should be settled one way or the other, anyhow.

With McInnis lined up, the Red Sox have the strongest inner defense array under the large canvas. Vitt, Pratt and Scott, with Scuffy can carry on otherwise mediocre team along pretty well through a whole campaign. A pair of hits will go around second base as the Red Sox are will never sink as low as the cellars disgraceful position slows things wide open.

Two managers may be better than one, and the Sox have a couple on the job, Duffy and Jimmy Burke, who directed the destinies of the Cincy Browns very well for a couple of seasons. But all the pilots in the world can't fan the Babe Ruths, or capture the long flies that mean runs if they escape, or things like that.

How strange the Sox will look without Hooper; something like the old strawberry festival without the strawberries. Bar Leibold, Pratt, and Collins, the newcomers, will receive a royal welcome. The fans are in a mood to be very generous this season, if given the slightest opportunity.

All three astern clubs will be entertained at the Back Bay orchard, and then the natives took for the fair parts. They work through the east and follow with a visit to each of the Western battle grounds. The team will be home for two weeks, however, and that should be sufficient time for the practice that is supposed to be part of the spring training trip.

Save for the first couple of days, the whole month of May will be spent on alien soil. And the real success of the home season will hinge on what happens on the long journey.

The gates opened at one o'clock, the band opened half an hour later, and the pastime started at 3:15. Prices have remained slightly, persons other than box seat holders being nicked for the war tax this season.

* * *

Allan Russell held up nicely for the Red Sox for seven innings in the final tilt at the Polo Grounds, pitching airtight ball in the pinches and handling himself in a very able manner. Then along came the Bambino, Ruth, and knocked Allan for a goal.

Babe got pinched for speeding earlier in the day, but that didn't hurt his batting eye. He came up in the seventh with the score 1 and 1, and Peck on base. He crashed the apple up against the coping between the upper and lower stands, which is a home run zone.

After that a lot of things happened to Russell, including a homer by Bob Russell in the eighth, with Ruth and Pipp there. No one ever results in more than that one on the Polo grounds.

Old Jack Quinn pitched pretty good ball today against the Red Sox, though he got a little careless towards the close. The lower end of the Sox order did nearly all of the hitting. Ruel and Scott each grabbed three hits and another trio was divided between Pratt and Colins and McInnis.

PAT McCARTHY TO BOX JAMIESON

Meeting at the Commonwealth A. A. Saturday Night Is Second Between Battlers

Ted Jamieson, Milwaukee heavyweight, and Pat McCarthy of Roxbury are expected to furnish plenty of action when they clash in a ten-round bout at the Commonwealth A. A. show at Scenic Temple Saturday night.

It will be the second meeting between these sturdy ring warriors, when they battled at the Varsity Club last February, McCarthy won in three rounds. During the torrid mill-ing, Jamieson suffered a cut on the face which bled so profusely that Eddie Mack, his manager, stopped the mill.

Jamieson has been fighting at a torrid clip of late and is of the opinion he carries too many guns for McCarthy. The latter is fit and is ready for a hard battle.

RED SOX ARE BACK HOME

Fans Will Pass on Duffy's Team Two Real Fighting Men to Meet Babe Ruth Still Hitting Homers

By JACK CONWAY

Hughey Duffy's Red Sox made their debut today after games on the road with Washington and New York. Boston fans will not pass judgment on the team until they receive an opportunity to see Duffy's men in action. The Red Sox showed plenty of fighting baseball in their series with the Senators, but did not look so well when pitted against the Yankees. Maybe they displayed their true form in the contests at Washington. Then, on the other hand, the club may have been playing its normal game against New York. In sizing up those two series, however, one should bear in mind, that the Yankees are a much stronger ball club than the Senators.

Boston and New England fans will have an opportunity during the next few days to secure a real line on the merits of the team. For the sake of sport in this city, it is our hope that the Red Sox display some of the brand of baseball that was famous throughout the land during the regime of Bill Carrigan.

It is interesting to read of two real fighting men signing for a ring contest. Ted Jamieson, who fought in the army during the war, will meet Pat McCarthy, who saw service in the navy, at the Commonwealth A. A.'s show at Scenic Temple Saturday night. Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Commonwealth A. A. says Jamieson and McCarthy will fight just as well in the ring as they did in the Great Adventure. This means a torrid engagement.

Babe Ruth is still handing out medicine to Baseball, the sick child of Sport, in the form of home runs. The Batterer has now two circuit clouts to his credit. A good ball player and a great drawing card is this saviour of the national pastime.

REDDY WIGMORE TO BUILD RING

Philadelphia Expert Engaged by Olympic A. A.; Praises Braves Field Location

"Reddy" Wigmore, of Philadelphia, the greatest ring constructor in the country and the man who erected the Dempsey-Willard ring at Toledo for Tex Rickard, has been engaged by the Olympic A. A. of Boston to build their ring for their first outdoor boxing show at Braves Field, Monday, May 2.

Wigmore thinks Braves Field an ideal place for outdoor shows and told the directors that he would guarantee a splendid ring, with ample room for spectators. Wigmore has been a ring constructor for many years. He has always built the outdoor rings at the Philadelphia ball parks. In addition to building the Dempsey-Willard ring, he also erected the rings for the Gibbons-McFarland, Leonard-Kilbane, Leonard-Britton, and Tendler-Jackson bouts. Wigmore notified the Olympic A. A. directors that he is now negotiating with Tex Rickard to build the ring for the Dempsey-Carpentier contest.

SOMERVILLE WALLOPS EVERETT ON DIAMOND

Somerville High outclassed Everett, 18 to 2, in a Suburban League game at Everett. Somerville hit Pitcher Hill heavily in the third inning, and after thirteen Somerville batters took turns the side was retired, but not before nine runs were scored. Munroe, a left-handed colored lad, then took the mound and pitched with more effect.

Carrier twirled seven innings for Somerville and allowed but one hit. Simpson relieved him. Simpson featured with the stick, hitting two doubles and a single in four times up. Everett gave its pitchers very poor support.

EXETER EASILY BEATS HAVERHILL HIGH

Exeter, N. H., April 20.—Exeter easily defeated Haverhill High, winning, 14 to 2, in a seven-inning game, called by agreement. The result was settled in the first inning, when Harrington allowed four singles, a triple, walked one batsman and hit another.

BRAVES AND DODGERS IN FOUR-GAME SERIES

New York, April 21.—The Boston Braves, who crowned the Dodgers four times out of five in the opening games of the year, started a four-game series here today. Although the team just dropped two in a row to the Giants back in Boston, it is apparently just as scrappy and confident as ever. As Manager Robinson puts it, the Braves look as dangerous as any club in the league just now.

Brooklyn's fine pitchers are in terrible shape now, after a week of campaigning, and the Boston sluggers may be spotted a hit, although a few of the Braves are sure to hit hard all season. Nehlsbach, who led the league last season while a run-of-the-mill pitcher with the Pirates promises to do the same thing this season as a regular Brave.

Big Joe Oeschger, who has beaten the Robins once, and been defeated twice, will be due to toss his third game of the young campaign. He's the best chance of any of the Boston flingers and has always been a tough bird for the local athletes to buck. Southpaw Sherrod Smith seemed to be Robbie's leading candidate for the day's mound job.

Poor pitching handed the final game of the giant series to the Mudcats, but the Braves outhit the Giants 12 to 11, and showed ability to score plenty of runs, but wildness on the part of Scott, who started, ruined the contest in the first two innings. Later on, Pierotti was given a chance, but he walked three men in a row, and helped the New Yorkers to a few runs.

The return of Fillingim to active service was the bright part of Brooklyn's defeat. The veteran spitballer, whose arm has been limping, went through three innings with ease, and his effectiveness is ever boasted. He is now ready to take his regular turn on the mound, which should help Manager Mitchell to get back on the victory lane.

Cheeseboro continued his long hitting, getting three out of five and being robbed of another on a fine catch by Hood, who played a slashing game at third for the Mudhens. Nick's chalkest blow was a tremendous drive to deep center, an easy home run. He led an attack on Scott that caused the derranging of the star southpaw late in the game, when the home tribe threatened to blast his big lead the invaders had piled up.

HUNTINGTON DEFEATS ROXBURY LATIN, 7 TO 6

Bunched hits in the seventh gave Huntington school a 7 to 6 victory over Roxbury Latin in a fast baseball game on the Old Huntington Avenue Field. The home players found Lucas offering as easily, but loose work on the bases held down the score.

ZUNA'S SECRET.

I joined with several thousand fans in saying, "Ain't he great?"
When I saw Frankie Zuna gallop through the finish tape,
And when the crowd had disappeared and Frank sat eating stew,
I thought I'd interview the youth and learn a thing or two;
I'd figured that he must have been a sacrificing soul
And that he had spent days on days preparing for the stroll
That leads from Ashland village square, so many miles away,
And through a dozen townships small and to the A. A.;

A-chasing over hill and dale at a terrific pace—
Forsaking joys and happiness—neglecting job or trade—
And I would learn if sacrifice and such denial paid;
A single statement from Frank's lips gave me the hope I sought—
He said he was a plumber, and that answered quite a lot,
For we all know that, 'though we pay according to their rules,
The plumbers spend most half their time in running back for tools.

Johnny Kilbane must have become an extremely finnicky person. Recent statements credited to him indicate he has failed to respond to Tex Rickard's offer of a bout in Madison Square Garden solely because the offer was transmitted through Rickard's office boy. We frankly admit that anybody with an offer of $40,000 for one evening's work can easily approach us through that office boy's kid brother.

That Holy Cross varsity, Tunney, must have offered a very harmonious program at New Haven despite the assertion of Yale critics that the pitch he maintained was decidedly lacking in base hits.

M. G. O. of Fall River asks us to furnish him with three good jokes on tennis. We know of only one of them, but we'll let him guess at the first nine and tell him what "tennis" is on second thought, we won't even tell him that one.

* * *

No, Isadore. You are not justified in calling the Chelsea High School a fly team simply because Goose plays second base and Robin takes a turn at pitching.

Paulette has become "unpaulstable" to the semi-pros. The former Phillie who was declared free from organized baseball on charges of gambling, was given his good-bye papers by the Ohio semi-pros when that organized his services. It now looks as though he will become an amateur from necessity.

Golf News and Notes

Guy Mitchell showed newspapermen the new holes which have been laid out for the Bay State-Belmont Country Club in Belmont Heights and which will give this new organization an eighteen-hole course.

The ground is sporty enough, but needs much combing and this hard task is under way. Trees are falling daily and rocks are being blasted out of the fairways. The greens will be ready by May 15. The par for the new nine is 35, and the distance of the holes 230, 180, 360, 320, 150, 540, 320, 380 and 530.

Incidentally, Guy shot a 78 for the temporary layout which is being played. This is the lowest round made there this season.

* * *

Playing dates in Massachusetts for George Duncan and Abe Mitchell are: August 15, Brookline; August 16, Worcester; August 17, The Country Club; August 19, Brae Burn; August 20, Belmont Spring; September 20, Belmont Spring. The British pair will open at the Pelham Country Club July 11 and 12, and will play in the Shawnee open and in the national open.

Miss Alexa Stirling did well to play rounds on 72 and 75 in her first British tournament, finishing in a tie for third in a field of 120 starters. Miss Leitch led with 142; fine golf.

Draw Result in 13th Title Chess Game

KOPF SIGNS UP; GROH AND ROUSH STILL OUT

Cincinnati, O., April 21.—Shortstop Larry Kopf signed a 1921 contract and reported to Manager Moran of the Reds today. Third Baseman Heinie Groh and Centre Fielder Ed Roush are still holding out.

Juniors Capture Track Honors at B. C.

A cleanup in the field events gave the Boston College juniors victory in the interclass track meet with a total of 63 points. The sophomores, who ran away with points for a big field Monday in the running events, could only boost their total to 19, and the sophs with 10. The 1922 class has not been defeated in this branch of athletics since its entrance into B. C. three years ago.

Jake Driscoll featured with a new B. C. mark in the quarter-mile run, the only track event to be run in the last section, negotiating the whirlwind time of 59 seconds flat on a track that was by no means in wonderful shape. Ray Drugan, who was individual high scorer with 19 points, toppled another Heights mark when he tossed the javelin 134 feet, 8 inches. Incidentally, he captured the discus throw and tied for first place in the pole vault. Ed Bell registered 17 points, winning the shotput and splitting the high jump honors with Flaherty, a yearling.

Billy Nolan put across the only Soph markers when he covered 22 feet, 11½ inches in the broad jump, and Dave Mullen did the same for the Seniors, winning the hammer throw and placing second in the javelin event.

The quarter, which was Jack Ryder's first trial for his relay team in the coming Penn games, was a hummer, with Caffrey, leader at the start, passed early by Driscoll, and then right at the tape by Walter Nolan, who placed second.

Runs Equal Hits

Milton High turned eleven hits into runs and trimmed Hingham 11 to 4. Lewis of the Milton team got three nice hits in five trips to the plate.

HARVARD BEATS OGLETHORPE

Crimson Slugs Out 5 to 2 Win in Game at Atlanta; Blair Stars at Bat

Atlanta, Ga., April 21.—One big inning, the eighth, in which the Crimson batsmen managed to amass four runs, enabled Harvard to triumph over Oglethorpe University at the Southern League baseball park here. The final score was 5 to 2. Harvard hit in good form, lining out ten safe drives, one of which was a two-bagger by Blair. The Crimson backstop also drove in the final tally for his side with a long sacrifice fly.

Harvard made the first run of the game in the seventh inning on a double by Blair, a sacrifice hit by Pitcher Russell and a squeeze play. But the big inning was the eighth, when the Cambridge batsmen knocked in four runs. Hallock, Owen and Crocker singled in succession and then the right fielder dropped Parker's smash and three runs came in. Blair brought Thayer in from third with a sacrifice fly.

BROWN DEFEATS N. Y. UNIVERSITY

Bears Play Errorless Ball Behind Fine Pitching of Captain McKnight

Providence, R. I., April 21.—With Captain McKnight pitching in rare form and the team playing errorless ball, Brown defeated New York University 5 to 1. Merrewether's stop and throw on a liner from Hirschfield's bat was the leading feature of the game. Otter, with two hits in as many times at bat, led in the hitting.

Mike Was Bass Singer as Well as Fighter

By "Bugs" Baer

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Unaccustomed as I am to writing pieces for the paper it behooves me not to remain silent—especially at a time like this—when a few words from me would mean so little. Mr. Gink Fowler posed as Roughtown's Bad News, but the Truth is that he was only a Sandman Story. He was a natural tornado in the Roughtown choir. How come, then, that he should set himself up for a walrus?

I pause to state that my man, Night and Day Mike, knocked him edgeways.

RUBBERFACE GALLAGHER.

That rips the acoustics wide open. There was no streak of lavender in the Rough town chump's yellow. Not that he sang in the village choir. He had a natural tenor voice for topping factory whistles and boiler explosions.

Night and Day Mike came into Roughtown on a half-fare ticket. The first man he met was Gink, who was out cunning himself on the bright side of a hot stove, being a gentleman of the first water and Gink asked Mike what he could do for him. Mike put the treat on the champ. He said that Gink could do nothing. Chipped that he had come to Roughtown to fight and sing bass.

That started it. Gink took a loose crash at Mike's future and missed. Mike mailed one at Gink's beak, but the postage was short. It was give and take for sixteen rounds with neither side yielding more than a mile. Both boys had their ears knocked down, their teeth blackened and their Victrolas cancelled because they were back in payments.

It was a new fight after the curtain rang. They started in with renewed slugging. Gink stepped a few minutes to write a testimonial for Swampwood. Then he whanged Mike with a full chord from the Funeral March and Mike's share of the bright lights went out.

All this time the rest of the village choir were singing sweet songs. Gink chimed in as if nothing had happened. That was fifty years ago and today there is no basso in the Roughtown choir. Anybody who wants that job has to sing his way to it and fight his way out.

A. Mugg Tells Story of King of Hard Eggs

By A. Mugg.

Per Damon Runyon.

I am in at the Rubber Heel the other evening, and a bunch of us get to talking about one thing and another, the Rubber Heel being a place which is a great favorite with those to gather who talk about matters.

The first thing anybody knows we are talking about doorknobs, which is a way of saying guys who are hard guys about dough, and so many of these present know doorknobs that it looks as if I will never get a chance to tell about the hardest guy I ever see.

He is a guy back in my old home town out West by the name of Joe Blunt, and if anybody is ever hard it certainly is Joe Blunt. In fact, the softest thing about Joe Blunt is his front teeth. I see many a hard guy get slightly mussed up in my time, but compared to Joe Blunt, especially when it comes to dough, they are mere sissies. Joe Blunt dodges a ruining grips lightly back in my old home town when he is called a gun man or gunster. He puts on boots between a couple of bums every now and then at the Main Street Hotel in Union avenue, and he does very well for himself, especially as he has a saloon on the side. But Joe Blunt is not a gun man or a knock with his dough. My old man says a guy is not a gun man unless he has a fazzard between his fingers with a smawl, but then my old man is no hot on guns, anyway, and says he is glad he has a couple of boys that are not gun men.

Anyway, one time Joe Blunt has a bout fixed up between a couple of bums from Akron, or some place or other, and at the last minute one of the bums does not turn on him, leaving him flat. The other bum is all set and ready to fight, but there is nobody to fight him.

Well, Joe has the best sale he ever has for one of his bouts, and naturally he does not like having the sale he just the same to him as having somebody come out with his right eye on a buttonhook. So he goes running around town to see what he can do about getting a substitute.

He finds Jack Fighting Battle of Beer Run

There is a guy on his old home town by the name of Jack McGowan, who is a pretty fierce fighter if you put him in a barroom with a beer bottle in either hand, but who does not have much experience fighting in a ring. He is a fireman on the Rio Grande and is just in from a run through the Royal Gorge when Joe Blunt thinks of him.

Naturally, Jack is pretty tired, so he has to get a couple of real eggs in the Castle saloon to rear himself up when in comes Joe Blunt and says to him like so:

"Jack," he says, "I am in a very tough spot, what with one of my bums running out on me, and I wish you would come around to the Eagles' Hall tonight and fight this other bum for me."

"But," Jack says, "Joe, I am tired, and, furthermore, maybe I am not able to fight a man."

"Never mind," Joe Blunt says, "you do not have to look him. I wish you to do is to fight him and save the dough in the house."

"Well," Jack says, "all right. All right," he says, "I will fight him if you will make it worth while. What do I get for it?"

"I will give you twenty bucks for every round you stay," Joe Blunt says, "and if you can make a clean sky two by three or maybe four you will get a nice piece of change."

"Surely I can," Jack says, "but," he says, "I do pretty tired and I may not be able to stay the limit of five times during the fight to rest myself up."

"This is fair enough," Jack says. "Let us go at once to the Eagles' Hall where the other bum is waiting."

Well, sir, what happens but Jack McGowan steps out and gives this other bum a terrible panning right off the rest, and it is a hundred to one he will go through the whole fight.

Well, like Jack says, he is pretty tired so long toward the end of the fight records he goes down to his house and rests himself what we call on the plomb were out slamming this bum.

Naturally, Joe Gives Him the Old Works

Joe Blunt does all his refereeing himself, and he starts counting over Jack McGowan. He sets up to eight, and Jack starts to stand up. Joe says nine-ten, quick like that, and then he says to Jack like this:

"You're out, Jack."

Naturally Jack is pretty sore, but not so busy over losing the fight as he is about only getting in one round, and he says to Joe Blunt like this:

"What is the meaning of so-and-so do you mean by such a business" he says, and Jack starts to stand up. Joe says one-ten, quick like that, and then he says to Jack like this:

"You're out again, Jack."

HER OWN WAY

Helen Gorman, Young, Ambitious, Decides to Leave Home for New York

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

Author of Nation-Wide Reputation and Writer of Popular Novels and Short Stories

CHAPTER III.

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

In spite of Helen Gorman's belief that she had at last proved her independence of her uncle, she had to face one more interview with him before leaving her native town.

This ordeal she had not anticipated.

It was the afternoon before her departure for New York. The last load of furniture had been taken from the cottage. A kindly neighbor had urged the homeless girl to come to her for the night.

Helen stood in the centre of the little dining room looking about her. She wore a huge gingham apron and held a broom with which to sweep up the odds and ends of paper and string scattered about the floor. All day she had been doing this—cleaning room after room as the furniture movers left each one empty—except for dirt.

She listened to the men going slowly as they carried out her small sideboard. She had sold much of her furniture. Her dining room set had belonged to her grandmother, and was to be put into storage.

The men's slow footfalls reminded her of the sound of the feet of the man who had so recently borne her mother's coffin from the cottage. In one short month everything in life had changed for this girl. She was no more like her former self, she mused, than this bare room was like the cozy spot in which she and her mother used to take their meals.

A sense of desolation, almost of fear, seized her. She glanced out of the window where a drizzling rain was beginning to fall. She wished that the sun were shining. It would make life more cheerful. She wanted to drop down somewhere and cry, but realized, with an appreciation of her indifference to action, that there was nothing to sit on but the floor.

Compressing her lips, she began to sweep fast and furiously. The sooner the task was completed, the sooner could she get out of this memory-crowded house.

A Sudden Visitor

So vigorous was she in her efforts that she did not hear some one enter, and started nervously at the sound of her uncle's voice, close at her elbow.

"Oh, Uncle," she gasped. How you frightened me!"

"That door was wide open—so I came in. I fail I had a right to do this, as I am paying the rent of this house, therefore may take liberties in it."

"Certainly," Helen rejoined. "I quite understand that. Only—you startled me. I was so busy that I did not hear you until you spoke right by me."

"I am glad to see that you are leaving the place at least broom-clean after you," Daniel Sloane remarked. "I was looking at the things on the van that drove off just now. The driver tells me he is taking them to the storage house."

"Yes, sir."

"Where is your other furniture?"

"I sold it."

"I heard as much from various sources, but could hardly believe you had done this without consulting me."

"Why should I worry you about it, Uncle?" Helen argued. "I have been enough of a burden upon you all these years without bothering you now about matters that I should be able to settle for myself. You see, I have nobody but myself now to consider. I stand quite alone."

"You have chosen to have nobody but yourself. Yet it would have shown at least a semblance of respect for your mother's brother had you asked his advice."

Silence.

"I came here this afternoon," the man went on, "with the intention of showing you how kindly I am willing to treat you. I am taking this opportunity to tell you that you may come to my house when you leave here this afternoon and stay for the night. I understand that you are to leave for New York in the morning. I believe you wrote me that that is your plan."

No Help From Him

"Yes, sir. I wrote you about it so that you would know that the house would be vacant several days before the lease on it expires. I was going to telephone to you later in the day to tell you good-bye."

"Well, it need not be good-bye yet—since, as I have just said, I am willing to have you spend the night at my house. In fact, I have given the maid orders to have a room ready for you—for, of course, you have nowhere else to go."

"Oh, but I have!" Helen contradicted. "Mrs. Draper has kindly asked me to stay with her until my departure for New York. And I have accepted her nice invitation."

Daniel Sloane frowned. "You did not stop to think how it would look if I allowed my only sister's child to stay with a mere neighbor—did you?" he suggested.

"You see," Helen evaded, "Mrs. Draper invited me to spend the night—and you did not. And I promised to go to her."

"You make it hard for me to be kind to you, Helen," the man reproved. "Had you been different I might have taken you to California with me, this Winter. As it is, you have forfeited that opportunity by your independence."

Helen tried to speak calmly. "Thank you, uncle, for thinking of me in that connection. But, you see, I must begin to earn my own living."

"If you persist in your stubborn course you will see it through without any help from me," the man warned.

"That is my expectation," was the rejoinder.

FOR LOVE

AN ABSORBING TALE BY RUBY M. AYERS

THE stuffy room and Philip seemed a long way off; but she could hear his voice with painful distinctness. It seemed almost as if he were shouting at her.

"Mr. Blackner has made me a generous offer—possibly because he doesn't know my incapabilities. He doesn't want me for another six weeks or two months, so I can go; some hunting in . . ." He turned his head suddenly and looked down at her.

"Well?"

She raised her eyes.

"Blackner has made me a generous offer—possibly because he doesn't know my incapabilities. He doesn't want me for another six weeks or two months, so I can go; some hunting in . . ." He turned his head suddenly and looked down at her.

"Well?"

She raised her eyes.

Voice Was Quiet

Her voice was so quiet that it would have taken a more shrewd man than Philip Winterdale to have guessed what she was really feeling; to know that her heart was sore wounded, unanswered question:

"And what about me—what about me?"

"It's not as if you were dependent on me," Philip went on grimly. "You have got this place—and you can always go to the Highway House if you care to—mother would be glad to have you."

"Yes." The little monosyllable sounded to him like an indifferent acquiescence, and a wave of uncontrollable bitterness swept through his heart.

"You've no objection," he asked presently.

She laughed faintly.

"I've no right to object—we've agreed to go our own way—you must do as you please."

"Very tactfully put," he submitted dryly; then, with a sudden burst of passion: "Why can't we speak the truth and say you'll be damned glad to get rid of me?"

He saw her face flush in his face; he controlled himself with an effort.

"I beg your pardon." he said, after a moment. "I seemed to have no manners, no common decency at all in these days. . . ."

He drew a long breath. "Are you going to wait up for Peter?" he asked with a sudden change of tone.

"Yes."

"Do you mind if I don't? I'm tired • • •" he snatched at any excuse which would take him away; he dreaded another scene, but he felt that if he stayed he would say or do something which he would repent for the rest of his life.

"No—please go."

Eva listened to his step in the hall resolutely. How much more did he think she could bear, she wondered. She grasped the sides of the chair with both hands and rocked herself to and fro.

By the Dying Fire

She did not know how long she sat there by the dying fire; did not know that the minutes had crawled away into hours, or that it was nearly one o'clock when Peter came in. She had given him a latchkey, and he was in the hall before she could go to meet him.

She tried to chase the shadows from her eyes—tried to smile as she went toward him, but the smile was frozen stiffly on her lips when she saw his face.

"Peter!" she said with a catch in her voice.

He did not seem to hear. He hung up his hat and coat and stood for a moment staring in the hall, as if he had forgotten where he was.

"Peter!" said Eva again. She went over and touched his arm. "Peter—is anything the matter?"

He roused himself with a start.

"No, oh, no. • • • Have you waited up? You must be dead tired."

He went back with her to the drawing room. He stooped over the fire and held his hands to its dying warmth.

Eva watched him apprehensively. She saw how pale he was, and heard the strain in his voice. She tried to speak naturally.

"And Kitty? I hope Kitty is well?"

He did not answer for a moment; then he said hoarsely: "I only saw her for a moment. She didn't come in till past twelve. I waited up and down the street for her—I couldn't come home till I'd seen her."

"And wasn't she surprised to see you? What did she say, Peter?"

He laughed grimly.

"She certainly seemed surprised. She said"—his voice broke, but he controled it fiercely—"she said, 'How dare you follow me and spy on me like this?'" He caught his sister's hand in a hard grip. "I've got to tell someone—I've got to tell you," he said, almost hysterically. "But you won't ever let anyone else know, will you, Bonnie? Promise me—promise."

"Peter, of course not—but"—

"She wasn't glad to see me; she was angry," he went on dispairingly. "She said I had no right to come. She said that she supposed I was just spying on her to see what she was doing. And that fellow stood there—that brute Featherstone, or whatever his name is, and laughed. I could have killed him," he added between clenched teeth.

He pushed her from him suddenly and began pacing up and down the room.

She persuaded him to go to bed at last; she promised that she would go with him in the morning to see Kitty.

"We'll bring her back to lunch with us," she said cheerily. "Don't be such a goose, Peter"—

She kissed him and laughed at him, and sent him off to his room looking a little shame-faced.

This new trouble, coming on top of her own, seemed almost more than she could bear; she would have given her soul for someone in whom to confide, but there was nobody to whom she could turn. . . except Calligan! The name slipped unconsciously into her mind; presently, when Philip had gone to South Africa, he would be her only friend.

Kept Her Promise

Eva kept her promise and went with Peter next morning to see Kitty Arlington.

She was staying in an imposing-looking house, and Eva made a little wry grimace at her brother as they waited for admittance.

"It all seems very grand and blue-blooded," she said half laughing.

They were shown into a large drawing-room furnished in the not very beautiful taste of half century ago; the blinds were drawn, and there was the air of general formality about everything.

They were kept waiting some time before Kitty appeared; Peter had walked around the room at least twenty times before the door opened to admit her.

When she saw Eva she stood quite still.

"They did not tell me you were here," she said. She forced a smile "How do you do? I've been meaning to call, but I've been so very much engaged . . . Well, Peter?" She gave him her hand, which the poor boy grasped convulsively.

"I wondered whether you'd come to lunch with us today," Eva said.

She tried hard to make her voice friendly, but she was painfully conscious that it was not very successful.

Kitty looked taken aback for a moment; she had long since withdrawn her hand from Peter's.

"There's nothing I should have liked better," she declared then. "I'm longing to see your place—Philip tells me it is wonderful!" There was a gleam of maliciousness in her eyes.

"But I've got a tiresome engagement—that's the worse of staying with relations, they will insist on dragging on her, there and every where, and one must be civil. . ."

She smiled at Peter. "Why didn't you let me know you were coming to town?" she asked sweetly. "Poor boy! I knew I was cross with you last night, but I didn't mean it. . . ."

Peter colored furiously; he stammered out that he had wanted to surprise her. . . Eva could see that he was completely taken in by Kitty's sweetness, and that at the first kind word and look he had forgotten the hurt of last night.

Rose From Chair

"Then I won't stay," she said. She looked questioningly at Peter.

"I'm going to keep Peter half an hour and then send him home," Kitty said laughingly. "Only half an hour! That's all I can spare his this morning. . . . She swept the boy a look from beneath her long lashes. "I'll just see Eva to the door. . . ."

Eva followed silently. She was burning with indignation for Peter's sake; what a way to treat a man whom one was supposed to love!

"You'll give my love to Phil, won't you?" Kitty asked, as they shook hands. "I really am coming to call—I promised him I would. . . ."

Eva walked away with crimson cheeks.

"If that's being well bred, I'm glad I'm not," she thought indignantly. She could not understand how Peter could be so blind; she was quite sure in her heart that Kitty did not mean to marry him, and she deeply resented the patronizing way in which she and Peter had both been treated.

She went back to the apartment feeling very sad. She wondered what sort of a man Featherstone was, and if there was really any foundation for Peter's outburst of jealousy last night.

Through the half-closed library door she saw Philip writing at his desk; she hesitated a moment, then went into the room.

"Phillip."

"Yes."

There was a little additional color in his face as he looked up; he had grown so used to hearing her stop pass his door.

"I've just been with Peter—to see Kitty Arlington."

"Yes."

"I asked her to lunch, but she wouldn't come."

"No." The indifference of his voice angered her.

"She sent her love to you," she said deliberately.

"Thank you." There was a little pause. "Is that all you came to say to me?" Philip asked.

She fidgeted with a paper-weight.

BURIED TREASURE

By Jane McLean.

CHAPTER XXI.—Continued

IT was the Duke who smiled something unusual; he had remarked on the numerous steps converging toward the doctor's stateroom and, having a wholesome dread of American cunning, he slipped into the passage and, leaning against the door, heard the Captain asking:

"Who gives this woman to this man?" With a, wild rush he stumbled into Vandermeulen's stateroom and, regardless of ceremony, seized that sleeping gentleman by the shoulder.

"Quick, quick, your daughter—Pauline—she's being married!"

"Eh, what?" roared the half-waked Vandermeulen. "Being married—where?" With a bound he was out of bed.

"In Dr. Grant's room."

There was no mistaking the identity of the approaching Vandermeulen as he bounded down the passage and burst into Dr. Grant's room.

He was just in time to hear the captain saying "Those whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder." He was just in time to see Mrs. Vandermeulen kissing Pauline and the doctor and Geoffrey shaking hands hilariously with both of them.

"Aren't you going to wish me happiness?" asked the smiling bride, marching over to the saturnine Vandermeulen.

"What? Don't come near me—who registered this—I'll have it annulled—what's this mean, Captain?"

"It means they are married, sir—your wife asked me to officiate and naturally I obeyed," and he backed gracefully out of the room.

"You, William, I am responsible—what are you going to do about it?"

"Do? Do? I'll disinherit you," he pointed a finger at his daughter, "you shall never have a cent of mine, never."

"Oh, father," laughed the girl, how could you are—you look just like El Diabolo, doesn't he, Geoff"

"And as for you," raged the Pirate of Wall Street, transferring his wrath to Dr. Grant, "don't you ever let me see your face again—take my daughter—she's no longer a daughter of mine and starve with her."

"Sorry we can't oblige you," said the doctor.

"We're not in need of financial assistance, thank you, father, and as you won't kiss me, I'll tell you I have plenty of money in my own right—"

"What's that?"

"A fund," Pauline went on "that was left for me several hundred years ago—here it is," and she took out the ring that lay over the chest on the table and opened the racket-ty cover.

The expression on Vandermeulen's face was a study of cupidity, while the duke, his eyes glistening stared at the jewels with equal incredulity.

"This is my wedding present from John Dawson, meaning Dr. Grant," said Pauline. "So you see, father dear, as much as we love you, we shall never have to ask you for a cent."

Vandermeulen was not a fool, he knew when he was beaten, but he did not want to look ridiculous. He suddenly broke into a laugh. "Well, duke, they put it over on you all right—all's fair in love and Wall Street; come here, you little plotter," and he gathered Pauline in his arms and kissed her.

Then, quite without sequence, he plunged his hands into the mass of amazing jewels and glanced up at the doctor.

"You found the chest, eh — by George, these must be worth a million or two—why didn't I find it?"

"I guess you didn't dig in the right place," laughed Pauline.

"Don't look so sour, duke," cried Vandermeulen. "You can't beat an American girl—shake hands, John Dawson, alias Dr. Grant," he cried, "you're all right, any man that can do a job like this gets my O. K. Sorry, duke—I know a nice girl in Oyster Bay"—but the duke had vanished.

Stingiest Person

One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

A little less than a year ago, while sitting at home, the dreary afternoon was broken by the telephone bell ringing. On answering, a grief-stricken voice met my ears. It was a friend of mine who had called up to tell me that his wife had dropped dead and he wanted to find out whether or not I knew of a place where he could get flowers wholesale. He, to my mind, is the stingiest person I know.

NEW TANLAC PLANT ONE OF LARGEST IN WORLD

Magnificent New Laboratory Contains 60,000 Square Feet Floor Space and Is Equipped With Latest Devices Known to Pharmaceutical Science.

What is said to be one of the largest pharmaceutical laboratories in the United States has been completed at Dayton, Ohio, for the manufacture of Tanlac, the well-known medicine, which, according to records, is now having the largest sale of any medicine of its kind in the world.

The erection of the new plant was made necessary by the rapid growth of the business, as the older plant was found to be wholly inadequate to supply the ever-increasing demand.

By the erection of this plant the manufacturers of Tanlac are enabled to the world just one more evidence of the characteristic energy and enterprise of their business, and of their absolute confidence in the future.

This announcement will be read with interest by the hundreds of thousands of Tanlac agents scattered throughout every State of the Union and almost Canada, but by the millions who have used it beneficially as well.

The new building occupies 60,000 square feet of floor space, is six stories in height, practically fire-proof throughout, and is of striking architectural design. It also has private railway facilities.

This beautiful new structure now stands in striking contrast beside the older building where Tanlac was first made.

Visitors to the laboratories are strongly impressed with the extremely modern character of the equipment. Everything is provided and splendidly arranged to promote systematic and rapid production. The very latest machinery and devices known to invention and pharmaceutical science are here used.

The interior throughout is finished in spotless white, and all of the large Adv. force of employes wear white uniforms, which they are required to change daily. The main offices on the first floor are all finished in fine marble and mahogany.

The entire process of manufacture is conducted under absolutely sanitary conditions. Even the bottles used expressly to contain Tanlac are washed and sterilized electrically. They are then filled by automatic machinery and the finished product is therefore never touched by human hands.

When Tanlac was introduced into Canada history repeated itself, and the demand which has been created in the United States was quickly duplicated in the Dominion Provinces. As a result, it was promptly found necessary to establish another Tanlac Laboratory at Windsor, Canada, which is on a somewhat smaller scale than the plant at Dayton, but is no less modernly equipped.

These new facilities give a daily capacity of 36,000 bottles, but as Tanlac is rapidly being introduced into foreign countries it is probably only a question of a few years before even larger facilities will become necessary.

While the manufacturers are necessarily working for capacity production, it is fundamental rule of the Tanlac Laboratories that the quality of the medicine shall never be sacrificed to secure quantity output.

Uniform quality is guaranteed by a series of careful inspections by expert chemists, from the time the roots, herbs, and barks are received in their rough state from all parts of the globe until their medicinal properties have been extracted by the most advanced processes. The finished medicine is then bottled, labeled, and shipped out to the tens of thousands of druggists throughout the United States and Canada, to supply a demand never before equalled for this or any other medicine.

The executive sales offices are located in Atlanta, Georgia, and occupy almost an entire floor of the Fourth National Bank Building of that city. Tanlac is distributed by International Proprietaries, Inc., and sold in Boston by all Liggett's drug stores.—Adv.

President Harding on "Music Week"

The week soon will end; interest in music never.

This is "Music Week" throughout the United States. In every city musicians, managers of concerts and newspaper men, whether there be much or little music in their souls, are doing their best to arouse interest in music, which, thus far on earth, is the highest expression of spiritual feeling.

Every reader will be interested in the following letter written by President Harding to Mr. Arthur M. Abell of Washington, who sends the letter to us:

PRESIDENT HARDING ON MUSIC

THE WHITE HOUSE
Washington

April 8, 1921.

My dear Mr. Abell:

What you have written to me about the effort to develop interest in taste for good music in Washington, and, indeed, throughout the nation, has very much appealed to me, perhaps in part because I have been a very little of an amateur myself. I know it has been said that arts have not always been so favored under republican as monarchic forms of government, but I think a fair survey will justify a very fair difference of opinion on that point. Surely, the encouragement of arts in Greece and in France under the institutions of democracy can hardly be cited in support of such a thesis. Likewise, the history of our own and other American republics I think justifies the opinion that artistic taste and interest may quite as well flourish under the popular as under the monarchistic establishment.

At any rate, I very much sympathize with their effort, such as you suggest, for the betterment of taste and the expansion of popular interest in good music. You have my best wishes for the success of your efforts in that direction.

Very truly yours,
WARREN G. HARDING.

Mr Arthur M. Abell.
1726 Q Street, N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

The President of the United States is a busy man, with the Bolivar Statue, the Yap Island incident and other international stupidities left over by the last Administration.

He is busy with railroads, tariff, with our idle men, army, navy, taxes, foreign debt and a thousand other things.

YET THE PRESIDENT ALSO TAKES TIME TO SHOW HIS INTEREST IN MUSIC, which helps to make life bearable, and has slowly lifted men up from their animal condition by inspiring men with better, nobler thoughts and inspirations.

If the President has time to think of music and to write a letter of encouragement to those who are promoting it, YOU also have time to do your share.

Interest yourself in music. Encourage your children and others whom you influence to like and to hear the right kind of music. Have good music in your own home and hear it every day.

THERE IS NO MORE EXCUSE NOW FOR NOT HEARING GOOD MUSIC THAN THERE IS FOR NOT READING GOOD LITERATURE.

Music, like literature, is written. It is published on cylinders for talking machines, on rolls, scrolls and other records for other instruments.

IT IS WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

Music is the inspiration of the mind and the stimulant of the soul. It is a stimulant followed by NO reaction; a stimulant that does only good.

You should interest yourself in "Music Week," and in music EVERY WEEK, every day.

The more music men hear, the more they think and the better they think. The more they think, the less they fight; and the less they fight, the nearer they approach civilization.

President Harding has rendered a public service in writing the above letter, which, in this and other Hearst newspapers, will be put before more than 10,000,000 of Americans.

Another Maxim for Guidance of Mankind

"The kissing of other men's wives must stop!"

With these words Magistrate Schwab of New York carved for himself a niche in the Hall of Fame. A married lady worked as a manicure in a barber shop. Her husband called to take her to lunch. As she went into the coatroom to get her things her employer followed her and kissed her. The husband punched the barber and was brought to police court on a charge of assault. The magistrate delivered the above aphorism and discharged the husband.

The phrase should survive the occasion that caused it, like—

"Give me liberty or give me death," said Patrick Henry.

"The die is cast," said Julius Cæsar.

"Give her the gas, Kid," said "Bull" Cassidy, as they strapped him into the electric chair.

"The kissing of other men's wives must stop," said Magistrate Schwab.

Wouldn't it be fine if, to this list of undying phrases, some genius would add a golden thought that would forever keep down the cost of living? As, for instance:

I may be a crook, my lords, but I have never charged a dollar for ham and eggs.

First Fruits of the League

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

The first fruits of the criminal effort to fasten the League of Nations on this country appear in the Japanese situation which is unpleasantly acute, with Japan suddenly calling in men to the army, buying $5,000,000 worth of fighting flying machines from England, and importing Englishmen to teach their youths.

Why does Japan want thousands of flying machines? Not for the Chinese, not for the Koreans, surely. They bow low, or run, when they see a Japanese uniform.

Those machines are bought with an eye to war on this side of the Pacific Ocean. The Japanese have plenty of boats on which the flying machines and men could be sent to within striking distance of San Francisco, Los Angeles and other American cities.

What the league would have meant, had President Harding not scrapped it, is shown by Japan's indignant contention that Mr. Wilson went into it deep enough to make the Supreme Council's decisions, including the Yap mandate, BINDING ON US.

Fortunately Mr. Harding is President, there is a capable man in the War Department. And the answer to Japan is: "Only the United States can bind the United States." We ought to have more flying machines, submarines and fighting ships to back up that answer.

BRITAIN FASTENS OPIUM ON SUBJECTS

Ellen La Motte Explains England's Policy of Keeping Conquered Races Under Influence of the Drug Devil

This is the second of a series of articles taken from a little volume, published by Macmillan, in which Ellen La Motte, an American woman, exposes the terrors of the opium evil. It is the truth, compiled by Miss La Motte's actual investigation in the Far East, and by her study of the British Blue Books.

ONE outstanding fact in this study of the opium monopoly is that wherever the British flag waves over subject peoples, whether it be in India, in the South Sea Islands, or even in South America, there is opium sold, as cigarettes are sold in the United States. The British Isles are carefully guarded against opium and drugs, as are Canada, Australia and South Africa.

In Singapore, a British dependency, "we found that a large part of its revenue is derived from opium traffic." There are government licensed opium shops and opium dens. On entering a den, the addicts purchased their opium; the packages were little triangular packets, "each containing enough for six smokes. Each packet bears a label, red letters on a white ground, 'Monopoly Opium.'"

In "Protected" Siam

Opium is freely sold in the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay States. About 60 per cent. of the revenues of these dependencies comes from the opium trade. A steady increase in the use of the drug is shown by official figures.

Siam is supposed to be an independent kingdom, is "protected very sternly and thoroughly by Great Britain and France." Siam has been permitted by the British to impose import duties on all commodities except between Siam and Great Britain in 1856. The Statistical Year Books for the Kingdom of Siam and Great Britain shows that in the year 1917-18 1,859 chests of opium were imported. Each chest contains 140 1-7 pounds. The number of retail opium shops in 1916-17 was 3,111.

Hongkong was taken from China by England in January, 1841, as an indemnity, following the first opium war, when China challenged England's right to flood the country with opium. Hongkong is on an island ninety miles south of Canton, the market for British opium. The opposite peninsula of Kowloon is also British territory. The island of Lan-tao and various other sections of China—much larger than Shantung—also belong to England.

These sections are not subject to British control. "Here is situated a government opium factory, and the imports of India opium into Hongkong for the past several years are: 1914-15, 110,712 pounds sterling." This figure is lower by 1,000,000 pounds than the year preceding, only because of the outbreak of the European war; there were few ships.

The Chinese open markets were closed in 1917, hence the slump. But as Miss La Motte points out, "what we should hail at first sight as a welcome indication of a changed moral sentiment is in reality but the pause which precedes the casting about for new markets, for finding new peoples to drug."

"The Colonial Report No. 972, Hongkong Report for 1917, gives the imports and exports of opium, page 7. 'The imports and exports of certified opium during the year amounted to seven chests imported, 224 chests exported. Of these, however, the imports all come from Shanghai, and of the total export of 224 chests, 186 went to Shanghai.' * * * Seven hundred and forty chests of Persian opium imported during the year and 746 exported to Formosa. Nine hundred and ten chests of uncertified Indian opium were imported, 410 chests by the government monopoly and the remaining 5,000 for the Macao opium farmer."

Macao is a Portuguese settlement, an island near Canton, where the opium trade is in full blast.

Persia enters the field. Persia lost its independence in 1907, when the Russian-British treaty divided the country. Persia is now a British possession.

The Hongkong revenue reports show that about one-third of the total revenue is derived from the opium monopoly.

Sarawak, near British North Borneo, is another British dependency. When the last ruler died a great tribute was paid to him by the National Geographical Magazine.

He "had done credit to British rule in the Far East. For nearly forty-nine years he governed, an absolute sovereign, a mixed population of Chinese, Malays and numerous pagan tribes scattered through the villages and dense jungles of an extensive territory of the northwest coast of Borneo. Constant solicitude for the welfare of his people won the sympathy and devotion which enabled this white man, supported by an insignificant army and police, to establish peaceful occupations of civilization in place of barbarous tyranny and oppression."

The "civilizing" process, Miss La Motte points out, may be judged from the Colonial Office list for 1917, which stated that "the principal sources of revenue are the opium, gambling, pawnshop and arrack." In 1917 this "well-governed" little colony showed a return of $492,455 from such sources.

British Reopen Dens

China, again where opium is supposed to be abolished. Shanghai is supposed to be a Chinese city. Divided into two sections, one is under nominal Chinese control, one under foreign concessions, known as the International Settlement. Over the latter section China has no control. Although opium has been abolished in Chinese territory, in this International Settlement any one may buy as much opium as he wishes "merely by stepping over an imaginary line into a portion of the town where the rigid anti-opium laws of China" do not apply.

In October, 1907, there were 87 licensed opium shops in the International Settlement. In May, 1914, there were 663. In 1907 the average monthly revenue from opium licenses, dens and shops combined was taels 5,450. In May, 1914, the revenue from licenses and opium shops alone was taels 10,935. * * *

At the beginning of the anti-opium campaign in 1907 there were 700 dens (for smoking) in the Native City and 1,600 in the International Settlement. The Chinese closed their dens and shops at once. In the Settlement the dens were not all closed until two years later, and the number of shops in the Settlement increased by leaps and bounds."

In 1913 the amount derived from licenses in the international Settlement amounted to taels 86,386. The Statistical Abstract Relating to British India for 1912-1913 shows the export of British opium into the Chinese treaty ports, over which the Chinese have no control, amounted to over $15,000,000. This is a tremendous increase over preceding years.

In Turkey and Persia, which are, as Miss La Motte points out, under control of the British Empire, opium is grown. Great Britain, by gaining control of these countries, not only controls the routes to Asia, and thus clinches her hold on India, the heart of Asia, but she now has virtual control of the world's output of opium.

The third and concluding article in this series will deal tomorrow with the effect of British opium policy on America.

Women Revel 'Midst Want

WHILE hundreds of unfortunate Viennese are starving, richly dressed actress and society women revel at wine parties and feed expensive lap dogs good beef and lamb that might keep the breath of life in little children.

Vienna always has been known as one of the most brilliant of the world's cities. Now it must be known as the most heartless.

In no other civilized community could women support useless dogs in luxury while outside their windows starving children pick over the garbage thrown from the kitchens in the hope of finding something edible.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser tells next Sunday something of life in Vienna today, with actual photographs of some of the victims of society's selfishness.

Pretty little Dorothy Olive Clark asks $25,000 from Charles Hart, well-known tenor, because he injured her in the one spot which damaged her most. His automobile crushed her too!

That would not mean much to the average person, perhaps, but Miss Clark is, or was, a toe dancer, and the accident means that she will never dance again. It means the sacrifice of the large salary which she was receiving from the Hippodrome in New York.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser tells the story of this peculiar accident, and also tells something of the art of toe dancing which you probably never knew. Your favorite artist, who trips prettily across the stage, balanced on her great toes, is in reality suffering torture. Very likely her little slippers are full of blood when she has done her turn and retired to her dressing room.

Audrey Munson, in her recollections of life in New York studios, discusses a woman well known to Boston—Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. Miss Munson tells how Mrs. Whitney, a Vanderbilt and tremendously wealthy, decided to turn her artistic talents to the making of beautiful things, and how society frowned and shook its head when it was found that the rich sculptress devoted most of her attention to male subjects and employed nude male models.

RESPECT TO WIVES NOT ALWAYS SHOWN

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

IT has been said that Americans show greater respect to women than the men of any other nation on earth.

It may be true. Certainly women of some other nations are treated most disrespectfully by their men folks. In many places a woman is regarded as a mere chattel.

Here in America, where women have equal rights and are more advanced intellectually and every other way than the women of other lands, they are in a position to command greater respect. But it has often struck me that, even so, our women do not get all the respect to which they are entitled, and especially wives.

Brings a Laugh

A form of humor prevalent in this country is to make light of the married relation. Any poor joke about the wife is a sure-fire stage laugh. Any song with a similar theme is apt to go big.

Why?

Of all the women in the world, surely a man's wife is entitled to the most respect from him, yet she invariably gets the least.

The average man will go out of his way to be polite to a strange woman. He will bow and scrape and run and fetch, although she doesn't mean a thing in the world to him, and he may never even expect to see her again.

For his own wife, under the same circumstances, he has little ceremony. A man who may make himself a paragon of politeness to another woman may be an absolute boor to his wife. He may give her short answers, fail to remove his hat promptly, and display a total lack of the little attentions he lavishes upon some woman he has just met.

Not His Wife

I was standing on a corner not long ago with a friend, when a man and woman went past, the man carrying a big valise in one hand, the other hand clutching the woman by the arm, helping her gently down the curbing and across the street.

"It's a cinch they're not married," said my friend, cynically, "if they were she'd be carrying the grip and he'd be walking a little in front and telling her to hurry up."

Unfortunately, this is often true.

CENSOR OF CENSORS WILL BE NEEDED

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

EVERY censor, actual, or would-be, needs censorship—there can be no doubt of it!

Of course, you know Rudyard Kipling's "Recessional." There is a story that Mrs. Kipling rescued it from the waste basket, to which the poet had consigned it because he thought the lines worthless. So the world has that classic poem—as much the child of Mrs. Kipling's insight as of her husband's inspiration.

Read those verses again and recall that they were evoked by the commemoration of Queen Victoria's sixty years' reign over Great Britain. The poem chants itself with all the sonority and inspired impressiveness of a Psalm of David.

From the end of the earth, the captains and the kings, the far-called navies and the detachments of her far-flung battleline, had come to the capital—to celebrate the much-loved queen and to display to the world the power and the glory of the British Empire.

Kipling Sings

Then sings the poet—and none will charge Kipling with not being a proud and loyal Briton—

"If—drunk with sight of power, we loose wild tongues that have not thee in awe. . ."

And he calls on the Lord God of Hosts to be with them yet—lest they forget, lest they forget.

He ends the poem with prophetic warning and humble prayer, castigating the boastful nation, blinded with pomp and drunk with power, and calling for God's mercy on a people, which indulges in frantic boast and foolish word, and trusts in reeking tube and iron shard—

"All valiant dust that builds on dust, and, guarding, calls not thee to guard."

This summary of the "Recessional" is here incidentally given in such detail, because it brings a needed warning, at this moment, to the still warring white nations of the world, who seem to have forgotten all their fine spiritual professions in their eager madness for mutual annihilation and joint suicide—forgotten that "still stands thine ancient sacrifice—an humble and contrite heart."

* * *

What is really apropos in this citation from Kipling is just the line, "and, guarding, calls not thee to guard." And that, because it so perfectly fits the censorship situation in the United States.

None of us being so very good—As Elbert Hubbard used to put it—it behooves us to question who will censor the censors? The old Roman saw doubtless gave Kipling his line, for they had an axiomatic query to the effect: who will guard the guardians themselves?

In the sporadic, but continuous agitation against the licensed licentiousness of the movies, this consideration is too easily and irresponsibly ignored; namely, the standard, the ideal, and the principle which are to dominate censorship.

There are practical difficulties, perfectly obvious ones. Such as, for instance, the arrant hypocrisy of the very good, who claim to be shocked, when privately and inwardly they are really pleased by what publicly and officially they are bound to protest. Then, there are the varying standards of right and wrong, which seem to divide different moral fashions in Pennsylvania and in Massachusetts, for example.

Then, there is that vicarious virtue, which appears to allow censors to impose their own ethical codes and standards upon the supposedly inferior masses. Or, by aversion, to prevent the masses from seeing what these superiors (?) can safely see or hear themselves.

As though the ten-twenty-thirty cents per-son needed to be guarded by the patronizing goodness of the one-two-three-dollar man or woman!

Moral Snobbishness

This moral snobbishness is silly enough to discredit even sincere effort to make the movies healthful and helpful. And this type of soul-saving certainly suggests that censors themselves are likely to need censoring—and censoring. Which is more!

However, what—as really democratic Americans—we have most to censor is not the movies, but, is to the First Amendment of the Constitution of the United States: "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech, etc."

At least the same caution, which prevents our cutting off our noses to spite our faces, must guard us against ruthless surgery of films, if we wish to preserve the principle of free speech, involved in a free and fairly uncensored screen.

On the other hand, the police everywhere must protect the public—old as well as young, good as well as bad—against the obvious indecencies of the screen.

But freedom in the presentation of thought—whether by mouth, print, or picture—must be preserved as a sacred democratic principle."

For this principle we can take some risk—and we can afford to pay a price.
